WOODSTOCK

Woodstock, Sept. 21.—A very interesting side light on the European war is set forth by Joachim Kaiser, who is at present living in Shady with his wife, also a famous writer and journalist. Mr. Kaiser is at present engaged in writing a novel which will be called "Venus Dolores" and which is due for publication this fall.

After many harrowing experiences Mr. and Mrs. Kaiser managed to escape from Germany to Italy. It was in Florence that Mr. Kaiser gathered the idea of his book, which was suggested by Botticelli's picture "The Birth of Venus."

With equal difficulty they finally made their escape from Italy and after many vivid and distressing experiences, found themselves in America. Mrs. Kaiser has appeared on the lecture program in Chicago with Thomas Mann and has had a wide experience in lecture work throughout the United States. The couple are planning a week-end party at Woodlawn house from September 27 to September 29 and have invited a number of distinguished guests, with whom it is expected to be present. One of the subjects discussed will be "Love and Marriage in Europe." There will be an informal luncheon on Saturday September 27, and a literary afternoon will follow at which Mr. Kaiser will read a chapter of his new book. It is expected that D. A. Saunders, writer and lecturer will be present. Mrs. Kaiser will present her European experiences. Other distinguished celebrities have been invited and under the program the guests will leave on a jaunt and sight seeing tour around Woodstock and environs.

The Travel pictures of Alvin Better will be presented at Town Hall here on Sunday, September 22 at 9 p. m. This has heretofore been said to be a tribute performance for the late Cushman Parker. It is anticipated that there will be a large audience. Mrs. Inez Carroll Richards, the celebrated pianist, will appear on the program.

Lackawack Dam Project Resembles Huge Set for Movies

Work in Progress Gives New Aspect To Country Region

Where the Rondout Changes Its Course for the Future Health of New York

Major Construction Is Now at Finish of First Year; Highway Jobs Also Well Under Way

Soon the Rondout, like the Esopus and the Schoharie creeks will contribute a share of its flow to the needs of New York, but even when this job is done the growing thirst and health demands of a metropolis will not be fully supplied.

Next on the list for tapping are streams in the Neversink and Delaware watersheds and two more reservoirs like that now under construction at Lackawack will harness Catskill Mountain water for the world's greatest city.

Last year's drouth, which lowered the Ashokan and Gilboa reservoirs to the danger point, indicated the pressing need for additional reservoirs and the project now under way will not be finished too soon.

Within the year men have changed the character of the countryside in the peaceful Lackawack valley, but the machines which make possible the amazing progress of their work, will continue moulding soil and rock for at least five more years before the job is done.

Started Last Year

A report last August 20 showed the dam project 12.1 per cent completed. It was started in October of 1939 with six years allowed by contract for completion at an estimated cost of $15,486,150.

All of the 20 caissons to be built in the dam structure have been sunk but there is considerable work on these yet before they are finished. Nearly 1,000 men are employed on the work now under way at Lackawack and many of these are lost from sight during the working day in the vastness of the project.

Work on the diversion tunnel, which changes the course of the Rondout creek from the construction site to a point just below Lackawack was finished last March and it will continue in use as part of the over-flow system when the dam is completed.

Highway construction is now in progress on both sides of the reservoir site and the road on the north side, it is expected, will be finished within another month. A bridge over the Rondout just below Lackawack is also nearing completion at a point near where the north and south roads join.

Mason & Hanger are the contractors for the building of the dam, Ottaviano & MacDonald for the one highway and Reiss & Weinsier for the other.

Nearly 20 Miles

Approximately 20 miles of highway will be built and the two roads will allow for encirclement of the reservoir like the two boulevards around the Ashokan.

The August report on the progress of the work in the Lackawack region showed that the 8 1/4 miles of road to be built by Ottaviano & MacDonald at an estimated cost of $942,660 was then 57.3 per cent completed and that being constructed for 11 1/4 miles by Reiss & Weinsier 22.8 per cent. The estimated cost for the latter is $1,084,861.

The dam will be a half mile long and a quarter of a mile wide at its widest point. It will be 170 feet above the floor of the valley and will require 5,000,000 cubic yards of earth for fill.

Of the men working on the major project 800 are employed by the contractor and 110 by the Lackawack Division of the Watershed Department, Board of Water Supply, City of New York. N. LeRoy Hammond is the division engineer in charge of the project; Charles Bouten, supervisor of highways, and Bert Dibble, supervisor of the dam.

Buildings Removed

Every building in the former village of Lackawack has been removed within the past year and there is nothing left to indicate that a community ever existed there. Most of the work is in progress within the former village limits and the dam is being built at a point where once stood several houses.

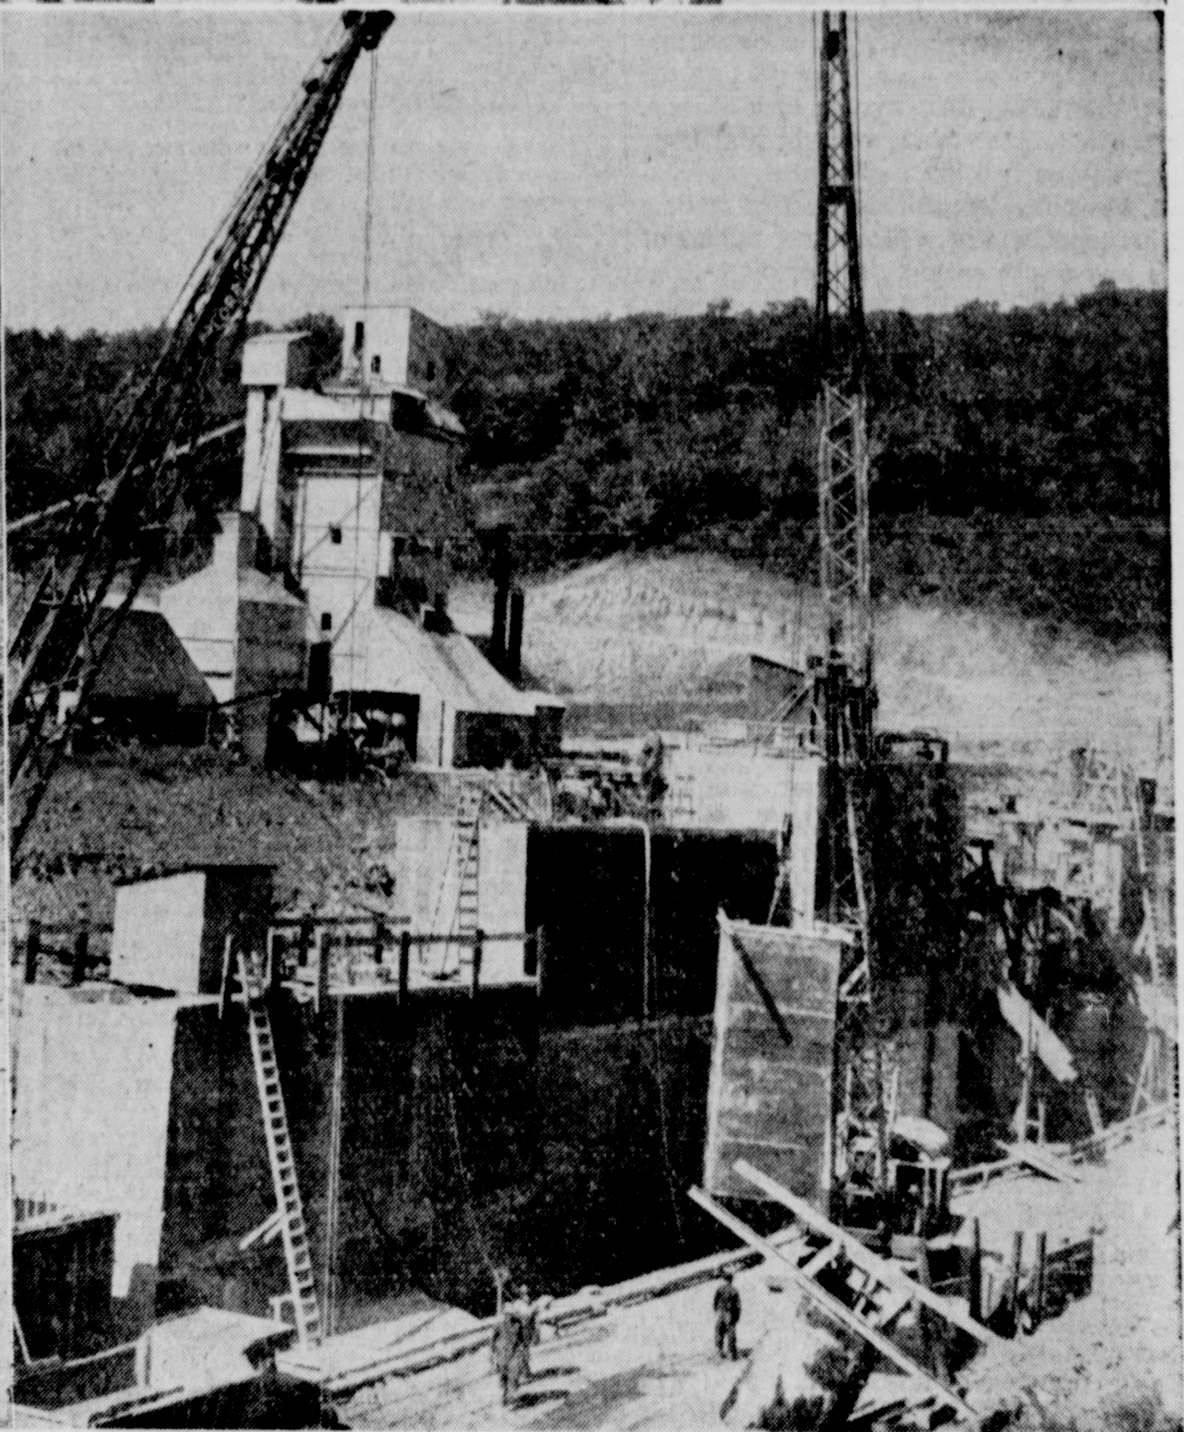

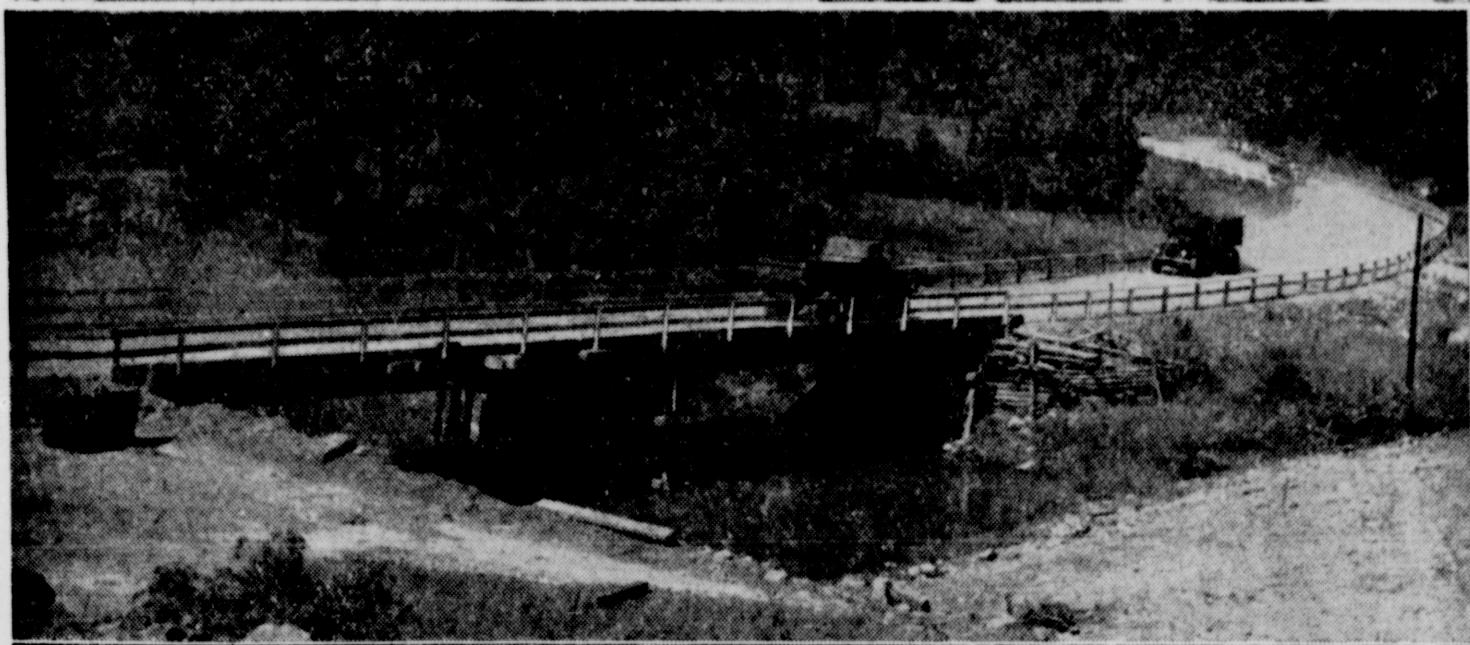

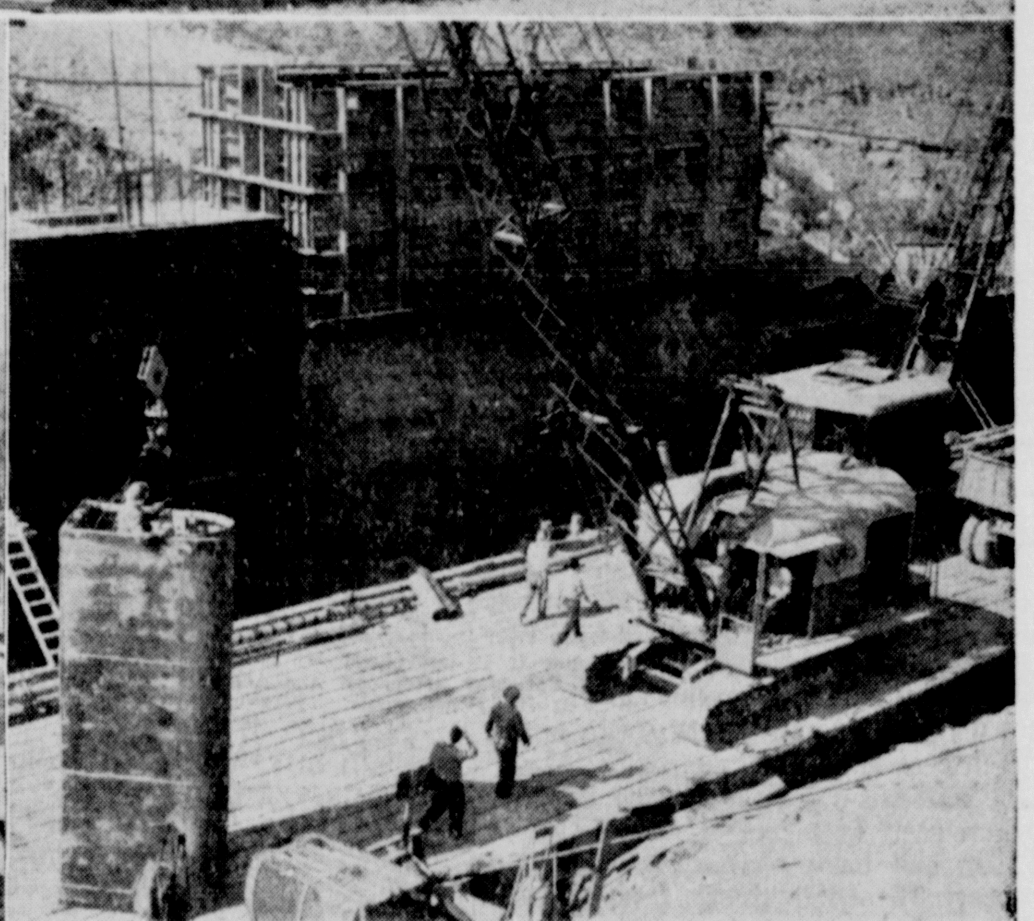

From the higher roads the main center of construction looks like a gigantic movie set and the caissons are lined up like buildings on the main business street of a small city. A sturdy platform has been built along the lower ground level and on this move the heavy trucks and tractor-drawn cranes and other machine units.

Similar projects will be under way within the next few years up in the Neversink Valley and at Downsville and certain phases of preliminary work have been completed at both places. It was reported this week that a contract for construction of a highway around the proposed Neversink dam will be let next Tuesday and a land survey has been started in the Downsville area.

Mobilization of V.F.W. Slated for Poughkeepsie

The second district mobilization of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States will be held at Poughkeepsie tomorrow with a parade starting at 1:30 p. m. The meeting will follow immediately after the parade and will be held at the Governor Clinton school on Montgomery street.

This parade is scheduled to be the largest ever to be held by a district mobilization meet. Between 35 and 40 musical units have signified their intention of taking part in this demonstration. Joyce-Schrick Post No. 1366 will march in the fifth division.

Shown above is a spot which men have made a virtual "anthill" of activity at Lackawack, as many jobs are in progress during each working day. The formal flow of the Rondout creek which later will be harnessed behind the walls of the dam, has been diverted through a tunnel to allow the work of progress. Shown at the top is a panoramic view of what has been accomplished within the past year and the view gives a full sweep of the 20 caissons which have been sunk to prevent seepage through the dike. At center left men are shown at work on top of one of the caissons emptying mud hauled in huge buckets from the bottom of the structure. At center is a view of the new bridge being built over the Rondout just below Lackawack and at right is a view of the large cranes at work lifting the heavier units used on the job. Next left is a view of a bridge built along the detour for route 55 which passes through the former village of Lackawack. Near this bridge once were many houses which have passed from the scene as the men began work on the project. At lower left is a view of the outlet of the diversion tunnel which runs hundreds of feet through the side of a mountain and at lower right is a close-up of a section of the caissons showing one of the cranes in a hoisting position.

MILITARY DEMOCRACY
With the recommendations of members for the draft boards the wheels have started for the selective draft on October 16 of all Americans from 21 through 35 years old and interest will run high in the forthcoming drawings.

The work of the draft board will not be easy, the members comprising the boards giving an impartial and fearless performance of duty.

All men liable to the draft must receive equal treatment under the law at the hands of these men who will volunteer their services to this difficult and thankless task. The registration and exemption boards must treat all alike so that there will not be the slightest basis for charges of favoritism.

The men who are drawn for service will know that their selection was made fairly and honestly under the rules and undoubtedly there will be no effort on the part of any man so drawn to evade service dishonestly.

The army draft is viewed with a mixture of reluctance and gladness. We are not a military people. Yet from our beginning the American people were accustomed to bearing arms, alike for peaceful use and for defense. In revolutionary days, and even in Civil War days, the transition from civilian to martial life was easy. A citizen could go to the front with his own gun, do his duty with it and bring it back home with him.

It is different now in many ways. Modern warfare requires far more careful, varied training and more powerful and complex weapons. There is a change from personal fighting to highly mechanized and impersonal warfare. But in the quality of our troops and in their relations to each other and to the nation they serve, there may be little change.

For the character of Americans, and their relation to each other and to their government, has not altered much, in spite of time and immigration and a far greater mixing of races in our citizenship. The army trained for protection of our American democracy will itself be democratic, like its predecessors. As the President says:

"In the military service, Americans from all walks of life, rich and poor, country-bred and city-raised, farmer, student, manual laborer and white collar worker, will learn to live side by side, to depend on each other in military drills and maneuvers, and to appreciate each other's dignity as American citizens."

Such by-products of army training are very much worth while.

CHEMICAL PROGRESS
Speaking of revolutions, the work of the National Farm Chemurgic Council should not be overlooked. That body's reason for existence is to find new industrial uses for farm products. Right now it is seeking especially new uses for surplus crops which were formerly exported and the cultivation of new crops formerly imported.

Industrial chemistry has already done amazing things with agricultural products. Soy beans, skim milk, castor oil and sugar cane fiber are among the farm materials which reappear in paints, cars, lubricants for automobile and airplane engines, plastic materials of countless uses, and so on.

So far the work of the chemurgists has provided more income for farmers and industrialists alike. That has meant a rising standard of living—more useful goods at lower prices. It has also aided national defense and made the country better able to stand a period of isolation from world markets.

AT OUR WORST
It is a familiar fact that many foreign nations, especially those priding themselves on their own superior life and culture, like to show the worst side of American life. But we seldom realize how far this tendency goes. In censoring American films, a columnist observes, the Japanese deliberately cut out and boycott the best of them. They prefer to show our gangster, train robber and wild-western pictures, rather than those dealing with normal, decent Americans at work and play, in their homes and amusements. They prefer our murders to our cultural scenes.

Why is this? At the present time, perhaps, partly to arouse prejudice against us among their own people for political reasons. But mostly, it seems, to keep the oppressed and poverty-stricken Japanese from seeing how immeasurably higher our standard of living is than theirs. And the same sort of thing is obviously being done in Germany and in other countries under her control.

MILITARY LOW-DOWN
Maybe the framers of our national defense have been making a mistake by not calling on "Technocracy" to do the job. This weird ideology, it may be necessary to remind some readers, is an economic system which was born in the brain of Howard Scott in the early days of the big depression, and means government by engineers, with everybody getting a big, uniform income. Scott tells an audience now:

"Technocracy contends that the United States regular army should be a permanent force of 1,000,000 engineer mechanics, and such an army cannot be trained in one year. Present plans for defense are entirely inadequate, and if these plans are carried out the nation is headed for an inflationary boom."

"Technocracy advocates conscription of men, machines and materials—the entire physical wealth of America."

It's a large order, and there will be some natural hesitation in obliging Mr. Scott. Most of us are disposed to give the current system at least one more fling.

HIGHWAY MAGNET
The Missouri highway department runs a big electric magnet on wheels along the roads, picking up tacks, nails and other bits of sharp-edged or pointed metal inimical to automobile tires. If it has a sweeper connection that removes broken glass, it is about perfect. In fact, one could ask nothing more except, perhaps, the automatic removal of jalopies.

ALLERGY OR SENSITIVENESS
There are some individuals who can eat the white of an egg but not the yolk because the yolk is almost solid fat, while others cannot eat the white because it is a protein food but can eat the yolk without any symptoms arising.

This condition of being sensitive to various substances is called an allergic condition and a new specialty in medicine which treats these allergic conditions is called allergy. These specialists are called allergists.

One of the ways of finding if individuals are allergic to certain foods, is that these foods cause upsets of the stomach and intestine, is by means of test diets.

I have spoken before of the great amount of research work done by Dr. Walter Alvarez on food allergy. Some new findings are reported by Dr. William Lintz, Long Island College of Medicine, in the Gastroenterology (stomach and intestine) review. His method is to ask the patient to name not only which foods disagree with him, but various members of the different food groups; for instance, under dairy foods distinguish milk, cream, butter, cheese. The patient may be able to eat the white of an egg without discomfort but the yolk will cause distress. Some will say that everything disagrees with them.

The suggestion is that these "allergic" patients be placed on a few simple foods which experience has proven produce the smallest amount of distress or allergic symptoms. Such foods are: rice in all forms, cooked or canned fruits and vegetables (like spinach, asparagus, carrots). The best meats are lamb and chicken. Others which help in making an all round diet are sugar, honey, lemonade and olive oil. If at the end of a week on such a diet all symptoms disappear, the problem as to the cause of the allergic symptoms is solved. Every two days from then on, one new food is added to the list. If a new food causes symptoms, it should be avoided and another tried. The patient keeps a diary and learns which foods cause symptoms and which do not.

If, however, symptoms persist after the week on the trial diet, one item of the suspected food is avoided every two days until symptoms disappear.

The foods found by Dr. Lintz to give the most difficulties are in their order of difficulty, cabbage, cucumber, cauliflower, milk, eggs, apples, bananas, oranges, fish, potatoes, chocolate, nuts, celery and wheat.

Objection Is Taken to Roosevelt Wangling Free Time From Radio Companies in Order to Save Funds

By DAVID LAWRENCE
Washington, Sept. 21.—Although the three major broadcasting com-panies decided to give free time to President Roosevelt's radio ad-dress at the University of Penn-sylvania, it was as transparently a political address as if it had been made by Senator Guffey, who, to-gether with other prominent New Deal Democrats, toured Philadel-phia with the President in a man-ifest piece of political campaign-ing.

Mr. Roosevelt used his Univer-sity of Pennsylvania speech to an-swer recent attacks by Wendell Willkie, Republican nominee. He had every right to do this and no-body can object to a President campaigning for himself. What is causing public criticism is the ap-parent effort to make a political speech under supposedly non-pol-itical auspices and to gain the use of free radio time and thus save the Democratic campaign funds for other purposes.

The President's speech can be divided into paragraphs and set alongside Mr. Willkie's recent ut-terances. Mr. Roosevelt took issue with the Willkie charges that Roosevelt had lost faith in the people. The President chose to con-struct this charge to mean that Mr. Willkie wanted to accept the judgment of only a few people—the managers of business. The President constantly turns most of his campaigning into efforts to array class against class and to create disunity as between the em-ployers and employees of industry.

What Willkie has been charging is that the President is ignoring the representatives of the people in taking important steps without asking for the approval of Con-gress. There is no reason to be-lieve Congress would have with-held permission to send the 50 de-stroyers to England, but Mr. Roosevelt was afraid of the peo-ple's representatives and not only made an agreement with a foreign government of transcendent im-portance to the country, but ac-tually ignored a statute passed by the representatives of the people in Congress.

The President endeavored also in his Philadelphia speech to meet the cry of dictatorship by insist-ing that as long as there are "free elections" no harm can come to America. What he did not discuss was the fact that free elections no longer exist in the sense in which the term has been used for gener-ations in America. It is estimated for instance that 10,000,000 fam-ilies receive checks nowadays or benefits of some kind di-rect from the federal government. Hence the willingness of a Presi-dent to allow his own officeholders who disburse these funds to name him for a third term means the use of governmental power and the absence of freedom in a party convention. No more palpable evi-dence of dictatorship is needed than the way the nomination of Henry Wallace for vice president was forced on the delegates at the Chicago convention.

Mr. Roosevelt in his Philadel-phia speech made no reference to the fact that the WPA rolls have been increased each election year and that the scandals over the WPA and AAA were so great in 1936 that the Hatch law had to be passed to try to prevent a re-currence.

Now the spirit and the letter of the Hatch law and the actual pro-visions of the federal corrupt prac-tices act are violated by the Presi-dent's own campaign committee which has collected upwards of $170,000 from the corporations whose judgment Mr. Roosevelt says he does not care to accept, but whose money looks good to the campaign manager named by his own personal appointment.

The President made quite a point of the difference between the point of view of Alexander Hamil-ton, founder of the present-day Republican party, and Thomas Jefferson, acknowledged founder of the Democratic party of today. This discussion of the two con-trasting philosophies in American politics had in it plenty of im-plications which the listening voter in the midst of a political campaign could not fail to un-derstand. But Mr. Roosevelt, after citing Jefferson as the champion of democracy, failed to quote the founder of the Democratic party on the one thing that is really germane to the present campaign—the third term. Writing in 1809, after serving two terms, Jefferson said:

"If the principle of rotation be a sound one, as I conscientiously believe it to be, with respect to this office, no pretext should ever be permitted to dispense with it, because there never will be a time when real difficulties will not exist, and furnish a plausible pretext for dispensation."

Then in 1821, long after his years of retirement gave him a chance to think deliberately and objectively about presidential ten-ure, Jefferson wrote again:

"The example of four presidents, voluntarily retiring at the end of their eighth year and the pro-gress of public opinion that the principle is salutary, have given it in practice the force of a pre-cept and usage, inasmuch that should a president consent to be a candidate for a third election, I trust he would be regarded as a demonstration of ambitious views."

Yet Mr. Roosevelt quoted Jef-ferson approvingly as the defender of free government and by im-plication took unto his bosom the Jeffersonian philosophy, when, as a matter of fact, the Democratic party today is split wide open be-cause Mr. Roosevelt chooses to ignore what Jefferson said and what every President of the United States has respected since the beginning of the republic about a third term.

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN
The naming by Mayor C. J. Hel-selman of Kingston's draft board recalls the fact that it was June 2, 1917, when the draft boards were named to act when Kingston's youth was called to service in the World War.

The members of Kingston's draft board were Samuel Stern, lower Broadway optometrist, Ben-jamin J. Hornbeck, transfer tax clerk in the Ulster county surro-gate's office, and Dr. E. H. Lough-ran, widely known city physician.

The draft board named by Mayor Helmsman is composed of Samuel Stern, who was chairman of the World War board, William B. Byrne, retired monument manu-facturer, and former Chief of Pol-ice J. Allan Wood.

Draft Day in Ulster county was June 5, 1917, and there were 6,324 registered in the county that day of male residents between the ages of 21 and 30, both inclusive. Of the number registered 6,635 were whites, 120 negroes, 538 aliens, and 31 alien enemies.

It is interesting to note that in Kingston the total registration was 2,011 of which 1,801 were white, 50 were negroes; 154 aliens, and six alien enemies.

There was a heavy rain the day the draft was made, and the fog and bad roads combined to make the work of collecting the returns from the various election districts in the county, but nobody com-plain.

The work of compiling the re-turns was done that night and the following morning in the sheriff's office on Wall street by Sheriff E. T. Shults and County Clerk Chas. K. Loughran. They were assisted by Undersheriff Hornbeck, Super-visors' Clerk Henry R. DeWitt and Captain Everett Fowler.

The draft or exemption board as it was also known was named to pass on exemptions and they had a difficult job in selecting those who were sent to the various mili-tary camps for training before being sent overseas or stationed where their services were needed.

Kingston's World War veterans and others recall the work of the local draft board, the members of which worked without compensa-tion.

They had a difficult job on their hands, and filled it well.

Natural draft work did not meet with the approval of all, they played the game fairly in se-lecting those who were called to the colors.

Helen Tancredi Wed To Raymond J. Mino

The marriage of Miss Helen Tancredi, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Tancredi, of 185 Albany street, and Raymond J. Mino, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Mino, of 207 Wall street, took place this morning at 10 o'clock at St. Joseph's Church. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Edmund Burke.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a wedding gown of ivory satin, veil, with a long illusion veil which fell from a cluster of imported French orange blossoms. She carried an arm bouquet of white gladioli.

Miss Dorothy Tancredi, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and wore a powder blue satin gown and carried an arm bouquet of white gladioli. Her head was covered with a shoulder length tulle veil fastened to a cluster of imported blue ostrich feathers.

Other attendants were Mrs. Harry D. Graham and Mrs. William A. Kelly, cousins of the bride, who were dressed in dusty pink satin gowns with pink headresses similar to that of the maid of honor. They also carried arm bouquets of white gladioli.

Dr. John Olivet of this city acted as best man. Ushers were John Tancredi, Jr., brother of the bride, Dr. Bart J. Dutto, cousin of the bride, John Hattmaker and Edward O'Connor.

A reception for 125 guests followed at the Governor Clinton Hotel. Following a 10-day wedding trip to Canada, Mr. and Mrs. Mino will reside on Fair street.

The bride attended St. Vincent College at Riverdale. The groom attended Cornell University and is a graduate of Fordham Law School.

Bankers and Wives Bid Clayton Farewell

Officers and members of the staff of the State of New York National Bank, with their wives, tendered a farewell dinner to Cashier Harold V. Clayton at the Stuyvesant Hotel Wednesday night. Capt. Clayton has been granted a year's leave of absence from his duties at the bank as he leaves shortly for Camp Dix and a year's training with other officers and members of the 156th Field Artillery. He recently was promoted to the rank of captain and assigned as adjutant of the 156th.

A feature of the occasion was the presentation to Captain Clayton of a handsome portable radio set. The presentation was made by Oscar J. Lawatsch of the bank staff. The gift came as a complete surprise to the recipient, who made a fitting response to the token of good will.

In addition to marking the departure of Captain Clayton with his regiment the occasion also was the eve of his birthday anniversary and in honor of that event a handsome birthday cake, decorated with small American flags, was part of the table decoration.

McCauley-Burns

Miss Irene R. Burns of Yonkers and John J. McCauley of Sawkill were united in marriage September 15 at St. John the Baptist Church, Yonkers, by the assistant pastor, the Rev. J. Meehan. The bride wore a white satin gown with tulle veil. Her sister, Miss Florence Burns, who acted as maid of honor, wore blue satin with rose accessories. Edward McCauley, brother of the groom, acted as best man. A reception was held for the immediate families after which the couple left on a motor trip to Atlantic City.

Maxim-Fredell

Ellenville, Sept. 21—Miss Lillian Ruth Fredell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Fredell of Granite, and Lester L. Maxim, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lorrain Maxim of Newburgh, were united in marriage Saturday, September 14, at Kerhonkson, by the Rev. Chester E. Grossman. Witnesses to the ceremony were Mr. and Mrs. John R. Fredell.

N. Y. N. G. Captain Honored

ENTIRELY PROPER TO EXCHANGE WEDDING PRESENTS IF THEY ARE NOT FOUND TO BE USEFUL

This is Emily Post's Answer to Bride Who Had Embarrassing Moment After Six Months

As I wrote in my column only a few days ago, the majority of wedding presents that are sent to a bride are sent by those who are not only willing that the bride shall exchange something not useful for something she may really need, but that she shall be able to choose something in place of a gift that duplicates one—probably many—she already has. Most people buy every wedding present with the understanding that the store will gladly exchange it if the bride prefers something else. But that this is not understood by all givers is made plain in this letter.

"I received a wedding present from a friend of my husband's mother—some one I had never met and whom I never expected to have call at my house. The present was something which although beautiful in itself, was entirely out of harmony with every thing we had and we could never have used it. So I exchanged it at the store for something my husband really wanted. But yesterday six months later—this lady paid me an unexpected visit and explained that she had ordered her present through a young friend who was with her, that she had taken such pains selecting it, and asked if they might see it. The request found me so off guard that after fumbling for an excuse, I ended miserably by saying that the present was still packed away with other things. Really, Mrs. Post, the whole experience was terribly embarrassing! (1) What should I have said? (2) And was I wrong in exchanging this present?"

As already noted, it is considered entirely proper to exchange presents, and even though it may cause certain givers chagrin to have their gifts exchanged—especially if the present was not one of many duplicates and therefore one that couldn't have been liked! The only safe thing to do is to know which people are going to care about your keeping their presents! But you are really not to be blamed since you couldn't have known about this stranger!

The Future-in-laws

Dear Mrs. Post: My sister's future-in-laws have made no attempt to get to know us. They are nice to my sister, but they haven't called on mother or invited our family to their house. Mother feels that they may not approve of us, as a family, because it is true there have been a few dark sheep in my father's family. My sister is the "whitest of the lambs." However, our immediate family has always been above criticism. I know mother is hurt. She can't make up her mind that they don't know what is polite, and is taking their discourtesy personally. I myself think they may be expecting us to make the first move. How can we find this out?

Answer: Your sister should ask her fiancé, and take his advice as to what to do.

MEMORY OF THE MOON

Chapter 32 Field of Scarlet

"Yet you're sorry, in a way, that Taylor didn't sell?" asked John.

"I'm sorry because, aside from me, no one was in the ranch as passionately as he does. Yet, I'd sooner lose it fighting, than have someone else save it for me," Constance said.

Raskthorne shook his head. "There's only one like you, Conchita. All right, dear, I'll stand by. Good luck."

Constance talked to Meg that afternoon because she had telephoned the commissary that she must have butter "immediately." No boy being present, Constance took it to the manager's house, carefully going to the kitchen door.

"Come in," ordered Meg fretfully.

She was making cinnamon rolls. She flattened the raised dough with a malicious motion of the pin, dusted it with sugar and cinnamon, then began dotting it with butter.

"I have to find something that fool boy will eat," she complained. "Off his feed he is, for the first time since his mither died."

Constance sat on a high stool as Meg rolled the dough. "Hope you'll look in on Peter while I'm away," she said.

"Where are you going?" "San Francisco," answered Meg. "Didn't you know? Pedro is driving your sister down. I go along as chaperon."

Constance clutched the stool. The kitchen was spinning around dizzily. The stove stood on its pipe; the ceiling was where the floor should be. Pedro had asked her to go to San Francisco once . . . with Meg as a chaperon, for the three days which must elapse between filing of intention to wed and the wedding.

"H-how long," stammered Constance, "will you be away?"

Meg slapped the ribboned rolls into a pan. "Three days," she said. "I'll be comin' home alone on the train. If you're to be in Beachport that day, I'm hopin' you'll pick me up."

In the time it took Meg to put cinnamon rolls into a pan and slide them into the oven, Constance reviewed her future. One of two things: marriage to John, weighted down with his kindness, passively accepting his wealth until her spirit curdled within her; or an emaciated spinster, brightly coy, selling dove-cotes to prospective newly-weds.

"There, now," Meg straightened up from the oven, dusted her hands and smiled at Constance. "I'm going to wash my hands and put on a fresh apron. I'll put the coffee pot on, and we'll have a hot roll before you go."

Constance sat because she thought her limbs wouldn't hold her upright. The tea kettle chuckled. The kitchen clock ticked, and Constance lived a lifetime. "Now then," Meg was back in fresh gingham. "Nice fresh coffee; nothin' like it, pet."

They sat at the end of the table with a tea towel spread for their cups. The rolls were hot, rich and spicy. They tasted like wood to Constance.

"Goin' to Confession when I'm down there," Meg confided. "Faith, and my son, fair pitted with the sin of me thoughts, these days."

"Sin? You, Meg?"

"Quarrelling." "Wantin' to take a hand where I shouldn't, Peter and Pedro quarrellin' like they never have in their life. Peter callin' Pedro . . . and I shouldn't say the words, and Pedro callin' his father a weak-kneed old blatherskite to lit wimen folk draw the wool over his eyes."

"W-what are . . . were they quarrelling about? Or shouldn't I ask?"

"Faith, and I don't know," signed Meg. "Well, maybe this trip will cool Pedro off. He's goin' down for Pedersen; goin' to pick up a crowd of ranch workers and bring them back. That sister a yours heard him makin' arrangements and she got herself a ride down, though he said he wouldn't bring her back."

Constance's white teeth cut through the warm bun. "Meg, these are the most delicious rolls I ever tasted."

"Glad you like them, pet. Here, I'll wrap up a few for you. Sakes alive, it's time for us at the dairy."

Constance arrived at the barn; slim, gay, face bright, and mouth liberally crusted with sugar and cinnamon. It was a glorious world.

Pedro, watching the patrol of cows ambling into the barns after being brushed; inspecting Manu-elo and Francisco, Bobo and Carlos; Pascal, Luis and Labarta; and finding them immaculate, though rebellious, he turned to Constance.

"Better wash your face," he advised.

Constance was too happy to be rebuffed. She felt she had received an eleventh hour's reprieve. She pushed a napkin-wrapped cinnamon roll at him. "Meg's," she said.

Rosen Held for Grand Jury on Bad Check Charge

Ben Rosen, arrested in Brooklyn September 13 by Troopers Metzger and Judge of the B. C. I. on a bad check charge, and who has been free on $500 bail pending examination, had a hearing before Justice John Rusk, Jr., today. He was held for appearance before the grand jury, bail being continued.

Rosen's then partner, Sam Apfel, it is alleged gave to the G. L. F. Exchange near Highland on August 5, a check in exchange for produce, amounting to $345.04. The check, signed Benjie Rosen, Inc., came back protested by the Brooklyn Trust Co., because of insufficient funds.

Shortly after this transaction, it is stated, the partnership be-

Pedro accepted the roll, his eyes lighting. Constance came back from the washroom, her face rosy clean. "Now go wash yours," she advised him in his own tone, and whisked into the barn.

Pedro, Donna and Meg departed for San Francisco. Constance and John watched them off, waved to them as they went down El Camino Real. Meg's plumed hat bobbing. Meg sat in the rear; good Meg, even Donna couldn't work fast with the stout Irishwoman watching her.

Despite Julian's black looks and the sadness of Dolores, Constance was happy. With new men to handle the work, she would be relieved and could give more time to figuring ways and means of stretching the money to meet the costs.

"If I can get through this first year," she reasoned, "the others will be easy."

She was already half way through. The herds had adapted themselves to the ranch with patient gratitude for good food, care and comfortable quarters. They were repaying with rich milk.

El Cabrillo, stirred from centuries of slumber, was producing food for both the cattle and the people.

The Cabrillos were already heavily in debt, but that wasn't Constance's concern. When Beachport realized that John Raskthorne only paid grocery and gasoline bills, they'd be more careful of the credit it gave.

Constance watched the sunset of that "third day." Pedro was due in soon. Tomorrow the hay would be cut. Tomorrow night when she looked down, that golden field would be silver stubble; and there would be shocks picked up by the gleaner, and the feed barn and silo would have the first of their home-grown fodder.

"Serves You Right"

JOHN was standing by as he had promised. She felt his presence like a shadow cast across her sun. He had refused to listen to her when she had tried to tell him she would never marry him. Now she tried again.

"No, Chita, don't say it. You will, in time. I know it. One doesn't wait long without winning out. Go on with your ranch; I'll help you win it. If you run short of money, you know where you can find more."

But Constance shook her head. She would borrow no more from John. For some time a plan had been forming in her mind. First, she must have these three years to prove El Cabrillo could be run as a dairy farm at a profit, and then she would go to the moneyed men of Beachport and borrow the money to repay John.

After that? She wouldn't think beyond that. Somehow she would make enough to pay off the principal of the new loan.

Pedro drove in at dusk. Constance heard him talking to Pedersen. "The men would be housed at different places that first night; the discharged El Cabrillo men were to be driven to Beachport the next morning. She slept contented. With Donna in San Francisco, and Nadine and Don visiting a neighboring ranch for a few days, the house was quiet."

It was the quietness that awakened her; a queer stillness like the weight of dead air. She lay still for a moment, and then she heard shouts.

Constance scrambled into her clothes and ran outdoors, the sky to the north was dull red. She ran up the hill and stopped short. That great field of golden grain was scarlet. Rimmed with fire, eastern steadily toward its heart. Constance went back to the house, Julian was at the patio door, half clothed, a candle in his hand, his eyes in the flickering light black discs of fanatical triumph.

Constance passed him, then turned. "Who set that fire, Julian?" she demanded. "Señorita," he returned, "El Cabrillo was ordained a cattle ranch. The spirit of these first Don Cabrillo, he have return to show hees displeasure."

Constance started to say more; to force him to tell what he knew; but it was useless. She went to her office and crossed off the four-figured black total she had that day placed against the debit column.

The next morning she went to Peter Taylor and demanded Julian to be fired. Taylor, tired, his leg aching, his eyebrows scorched, shook his head. "I can't, Michael. Julian is part of the ranch; like myself, he's another of your father's bright ideas. You'll have to sell the place to get rid of him, and that . . . that would be cruel. He loves it, we do."

Constance turned to see Pedro coming from the barns, and Don, back from his visit, racing up the hill.

Don was excited. "Boy, that was some conflagration," he said. "We heard about it on the radio; call for help by the fire warden. Sure burned up the old hay, didn't it? Well, sis, that's what you get. Serves you right for tryin' to be the Almighty."

Pedro stood tense, silent. Peter Taylor hunched his shoulders and scowled. "Is that anyway to talk to your sister, young man?"

tween Rosen and Apfel was terminated. It is alleged that Rosen gave his partner, Apfel, signed blank checks, with which to pay for produce purchased in Ulster county. It was one of these checks, according to the information secured, that was returned for lack of funds. Rosen blamed his former partner for the fact that funds in the bank were not sufficient to meet the check.

Cooking Shrimp
To clean cooked shrimp, wash in cold water, take a sharp pointed knife and carefully cut out the black strip outlining the shrimp. Chill until time to use.

Francis Scott Key wrote the Star Spangled Banner September 14, 1814, during the siege of Ft. McHenry by the British.

Did you hear the story about the man who lost control of his car, ran across the sidewalk, and crashed into a building? When he came to, his first words were, "It wasn't my fault. I blew my horn."

Harold—A man stole my car last night.
Officer—Did you get a look at the fellow?
Harold—No, but I got his license number.

The only time the girl of today tries to be an angel is when she's driving a car.

Read it or Not
American motorists have paid $9,000,000,000 in gasoline taxes during the past twenty years.

She—Aren't you sometimes afraid that you'll lose control of your car?
He—Constantly. I'm two installments behind already.

A lot of research and experiments have developed a puncture proof tire which is all well and good, but the fellow who invents a puncture proof sock will get our vote any old time.

She—This steamer is equipped with stabilizers, isn't it?
Captain—Yes, it is.
She—Well, get me one quick. I need stabilizing.

More accidents occur in the kitchen than any other room in the home, and that doesn't include cakes which fall in the oven.

Jack—The horses I've been betting on must have come from Russia.
Ruth—Why?
Jack—They can't get by the Finnish line.

Why?

O strange, unhappy circumstance! O tragic mystery of fate! Why wasn't Hitler killed by a fall, instead of Belgium's Albert the Great?

New Hubby—If I were to die would you marry again?
Movie Blond—You funny man! What gives you the idea I'll wait that long?

We have often wondered what would happen if an irresistible blonde met an immovable bachelor.

Smith bought a new car that impressed his friends favorably. One day a friend remarked:

Friend—It's not a bad looking bus, old man. What's the most you ever got out of it?
Smith—Seven times in one mile.

There is one way in which the world has not changed. It still likes fried chicken.

Sam—What do you think of a man who deliberately makes a girl blush.
Saul—I think he's a genius.

Early to bed and early to rise . . . generally means you will waste a lot of time waiting for the rest of the world to get up.

Gerald—Say, haven't I seen that face of yours some place else?
Sadie—No, its never been anywhere but where it is now.

This is usually the best way:
Usher—How far down do you want to sit, Madam?
Madam—Why, all the way, of course.

How States Will Respond To First Peacetime Draft

Census experts know approximately how many men will register in each state, how many will be eligible for immediate service (Class One), how many will be in the First Quota, to be filled between mid-November and January, and how many will be in the First Call, about November 15. Here are the unofficial figures:

The Draft And You

Draft 'Daddy' Calls Local Boards the Key

OPEN THE DRAFT, and you get a picture like this. Men flow from local draft boards to the Army (and to the Navy if it needs them), and appeals flow to appeal boards, to the President if necessary. Go-betweens are state governors. Most powerful units are local.

By MORGAN M. BEATTY
AP Feature Service Writer

Washington — In the records over at the War Department he's Lieut. Col. V. J. O'Kellier, special reserve, technical adviser, Joint Army and Navy Selective Service Committee.

But by friends, bubbling Victor O'Kellier is regarded, practically, as the daddy of the 1940 model of the draft. Not the AUTHOR, mind you. Hundreds of experts were the authors. But he umpired the complicated game of revising the World War draft.

Victor O'Kellier went through the World War draft from local board (Oconto, Wis., population 5,000), up through the state and national system. He's the only man alive who did that. He's sixty-ish and a lawyer.

Twelve years ago, he was the first civilian adviser the Army and Navy committee called in. Since 1937, he's devoted all his time to the draft system.

The draft, says Colonel O'Kellier, must be simple and fair. The World War draft assured fairness in calling up men by the double shuffle system. They're using that again. It also put all the original decisions in the hands of the local boards. The new 1940 model does that, too.

Married Men Deferred

Most touchy of all questions during the World War draft was the deferment of young married men or men supporting relatives. What about that today? "Every local board assuredly will base its decisions on the old experience," says Victor O'Kellier. "After a lot of backing and filling, it was generally decided at the time of the World War to go on the principle that marriage and the home are the heart of civilization."

"So we can assume that married men will not be called up as a matter of principle."

As for self-supporting, or wealthy wives who are childless, the local board could decide to hold special hearings. Odds are about 2 to 1 that men married 10 days before the present conscription law was signed will be deferred, especially those whose wives can prove they had planned the marriage a long time. The decisions will be up to the local board.

No Groups Favored

During the World War, the next most ticklish problem was industrial and agricultural deferment, which resulted in the troublesome "work or fight" order.

This time no groups will be deferred, no single industry will be dubbed "non-productive."

Take a man claiming deferment because he mixes lipstick formulae in a cosmetics establishment. The local board might confer with an army industrial adviser and decide that the desire of women for cosmetics is a matter of the national interest. Or it might give the employer six months to get another lipstick mixer.

To help with these problems, an auxiliary advisory system has been provided.

The Army will send an industrial expert to advise with each governor on industrial problems. In seacoast states, the Navy will send one.

System of Appeals

The governors will arrange appeal districts, usually areas covering every 600,000 people. The President will appoint a physician, a lawyer, a laboring man, an employer, and a farmer to each district appeal board, on the recommendation of the governor. Men who differ with the decisions of their local boards can appeal to the district boards. Likewise, a government appeal agent attached to a local board will appeal any decision the government doesn't agree with. Final appeal can be taken to the President in certain exceptional cases. Then there'll be 13 or more federal co-ordinators attached to the national office. They'll try to keep the system uniform all over the country.

COMMANDER B. J. KILLMASTER, chairman of the joint Army-Navy selective service committee which built the draft system.

"In the final analysis, however," says Victor O'Kellier, "it'll all be up to the local board."

and a steady flow of conscripts under the selective service bill.

However, the first arrivals—9,200 men and officers of the 44th Division, New York and New Jersey National Guard—began moving into tents when their truck convoys started rolling in this week. Three thousand tents have been made ready and work has begun on 32 messhalls.

Meanwhile, piles of new lumber dot the 7,843 acres of the reservation, and survey stakes mark out the pattern of streets of barracks and auxiliary buildings.

Hot air heating, running water and inside toilets will be standard equipment.

The first Fort Dix contract was let August 30 for $5,531,000—covering 850 buildings to be completed November 28. A second contract was signed September 13 for a 1,000-bed hospital. Two theatres seating 1,000 each, 14 miles of bituminous-surfaced roads, and water, electric and sewerage systems—all to be finished December 15.

The camp will draw its water supply from a new filtration plant with a capacity of 2,000,000 gallons a day. Work is also underway extending the runways of Fort Dix airport, the first step in a development which will make it the largest army air field on the east coast. A plot of 1,750 acres of scrub pine and cranberry bog land will be added to the rifle range to give the National Guard artillerymen room to unlimber their big guns.

Colonial Cassius M. Dowell, the new post commandant, is directing the work of rebuilding the cantonment, which since World War days has been used chiefly as a summer training camp.

Spain's Adherence to Axis Would Allow Warriors More Leverage

British control of the Mediterranean.

And the solution of both these vital problems hinges on the finding of some way to break the British control of the seven seas and that terrific naval blockade which is ever tightening about the Nazi-Fascist allies.

Spain enters into the picture because of its vast strategic importance as an instrument with which to attack the British naval domination. You don't even have to glance at your maps to recall that the geographical position of Spain and its Moroccan possession just across the narrow Strait of Gibraltar would make it the natural guardian of the western entrance to the Mediterranean but for one thing—Britain's possession of the fortress of Gibraltar and the naval base up against the big rock.

Hitler and Mussolini figure that if they can blast England out of Gibraltar from two sides at once, they can establish their own bases on the strait, they will have gone far towards wrecking Britain's control and so cutting her main imperial artery. Such an operation, however, would involve the cooperation of Spain, at least to the extent of granting the axis powers the privilege of operating from Spanish soil.

But Spanish Generalissimo Franco isn't casting his lot with the axis for nothing. If his co-operation was indeed determined upon at the conference, then we have a right to assume that the parley also fixed the price—probably an extension of Spain's African possessions and the return of Gibraltar.

The conference also most certainly considered further assistance for Mussolini from Hitler in the battle of the Mediterranean. One thing which would be bound to come up in such a discussion would be the feasibility and usefulness of a German drive down through the Balkans and on into Syria with the idea of attacking Britain from two sides at once.

However, while such a move would seem to be a possibility, it undoubtedly is one which Hitler wouldn't undertake hastily. Although it holds out alluring advantages it also presents two grave dangers—It would put Hitler in the uncomfortable position of having to wage war on both the western and eastern fronts at the same time. And it very easily might bring about a clash with Russia.

To Safeguard Jobs Of Members Drafted

The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America yesterday took steps to safeguard the jobs and the union membership of those of its 260,000 members who may be called into military service as National Guardsmen or drafted under the provisions of the Selective Service Law.

The union's general executive board, general secretary-treasurer, voted that, upon conclusion of their military service, union members shall be reinstated to their former jobs without loss of any rights and privileges, provided that they apply to the union for reinstatement within 30 days after their discharge from service.

Members called for military service, the board also voted, shall be exonerated from the payment of all union dues and assessments during the period of their service. All local unions and joint boards of the Amalgamated were urged to inform immediately employers under contract with the union of the general executive board's decision.

FASHIONS and HOUSEHOLD HINTS FOR WOMEN

Daughter of Ex-Star Shines in Own Right

Dorothy Bundy. . . Scarcely could escape tennis career.

By ADELAIDE KERR
AP Feature Service Writer
Dorothy Bundy, daughter of May Sutton Bundy, one of America's greatest women tennis players, has ambitions to chalk up other scores to her credit besides victories on the courts.

Twenty-four-year-old "Dodo," whose mother held both American and British women's singles championships shortly after the opening of the century, is sixth ranking woman tennis player in the United States. She loves tennis and hopes to keep on playing for years but she also wants to take a flyer in educational fields.

First, she wants a college degree. Next, she plans to study music—piano, violin and voice. Finally, she longs to travel around the world—preferably entirely by boat.

To date, tennis has pushed that program aside. Dorothy Bundy could scarcely have escaped tennis, for both her parents gained fame on the courts. Her mother, especially famous for her forehand, won the American women's singles championship in 1904 and the British women's singles championship at Wimbledon in 1905 and '07. Her father, Tom Bundy, was a doubles champion with Maurice McLoughlin.

Started at Age of 8
Dodo, at the age of eight, began playing tennis with her brothers. She played a lot of tennis up and down the Pacific coast and at 19 came east to try her luck. That first year (1936) she won over Sarah Palfrey in the National Championship and gained No. 8 ranking among the country's women players.

The next year she defeated Champion Alice Marble in the quarter-finals of the women's singles at Forest Hills and, though she went down in the semi-finals, she moved up to No. 3 ranking. After that she won the Women's Singles Championship of Australia in 1938, and, with Mary Arnold, won one of the Wightman Cup doubles matches at Forest Hills in 1939. Last summer Dorothy met some defeats and slipped back to No. 6 ranking, but in August, 1940, she placed herself once more in winners' ranks by annexing the Woodin Gold Cup.

There are points of similarity and points of difference in her game as compared to that of her famous mother. Old-timers recall Mary Sutton Bundy as a hard-hitting player who liked the back court and smashed her forehand drives across the net. They say she played a game that "wore 'em down."

Appears To Enjoy It
Dorothy is also known for her forehand, but the rest of her game is effective too. She plays a dashing game and when she is on the court, the gallery is inclined to give scant attention to anybody else.

Here is a lightning sketch of Dorothy Bundy as she appeared just after her 24th birthday on September 1:
Curly wheat-blond hair, bound with an angular wool braid to match her socks, storm gray eyes that change to blue when she smiles, sun-browned skin, sturdy plump figure.

She has a frequent friendly smile and an easy casual manner that makes and keeps friends. She is one of the most popular figures in the tennis world.

Likes Other Sports
Friends ask for bridge and luncheon dates, digitized youngsters crowd around for autographs. She has other "loves" besides tennis, says she's "crazy about water sports" and likes to fish, swim, aquaplane and water-ski. Her home is in Santa Monica, Calif.

A sports dress becomes an afternoon frock with addition of an apron.

Here's how it's done:

1. Wedding gown. Nine yards taffeta, $3.15; zipper, 25; thread, 10; lace, 10; veil, 45. Panties and bra made from material left from gown. Total cost, $4.05.

2. Evening gown. The wedding gown minus veil and jacket. No additional cost.

3. Sports dress and coat. Nine yards rayon, $9; two and one-half yards wool, $2.10; three coat buttons, 10; coat thread, 10; dress thread, 10; dress buttons made of cloth pieces; petticoat, 39. Total cost, $3.66.

4. Afternoon frock. Three yards rayon print, $1.05, plus sports dress. Total cost, $1.05.

5. Play suit and bathing suit. Five yards blue cotton, 70; buttons, 20 jersey panties, 33. Total cost, $1.23.

Women In The News ... And Where Do They Go?

WILL THE "Sad Princess" Helen of Greece go from her Italian retreat back to Bucharest, now that her son Michael is King again? The stately Helen is 44. Neither politics nor marriage has brought her much happiness. Rumanians have fondly called her the princess of the poor because of her charity work.

HER PRESENCE at Carol's side at first reported and then denied, the red-haired Magda Lupescu has been the subject of several paragraphs in every account of fast-moving developments following Carol's abdication. Some observers said she was on the train which carried Carol to Switzerland, but others denied she was in his party.

Common Courtesy —On Dressing In Public

(P) Feature Service
If there were enough old meanie college professors to give new students proper call-downs on dressing in public, freshman girls might be spared a lot of trouble later.

"My dear young ladies," the professor should say, "I intend to talk to you this morning about dressing in public, because some day you may have a husband or a boss who feels the same way I feel about it."

"My talk concerns that young beauty who has her compact propped against the books on the second desk of Row Five."

"But it concerns all of you, too. 'Good grooming' is as essential to modern American women as good health.

"You have to look your best in any competition. 'But you know as well as I do that you ought to prepare your beauty before you leave the house."

"I don't know a man who condones powder puffs in classroom, in restaurant, or on the street. 'Most men don't like to watch you apply your lipstick. They like to think your lips are naturally that red even if they know better. 'I need not say anything about those women who do the whole makeup job in public — from cleansing to the last dab of powder."

"But many of you sneak a comb from your pocketbooks to run through your hair any time you think of it."

"You lose some of your poise when you admit you're not sure you're looking your best by resorting to such repairs."

"And even in a girls' school, there's no real necessity for appearing outside of your room with pin curls."

"It suggests that you realize the importance of good grooming but

1. She started a fashion when she came to Hollywood but now is the first time she's wearing 'em on the screen (as in the picture). Who is she and what's the movie? By the way, what's her real name?

2. Age is everything in Hollywood. Which is older—Linda Darnell, the glamour gal, or Deanna Durbin, the child singer?

3. Tyrone will be starred in a new version of a famous silent film of the sea. What's the title? What famous redhead made her film debut in the original film?

4. Would F. Hugh Herbert's friends consider him daft if he suddenly cried "Woo-woo"?

5. How's your jargon today? Can you identify the set workers known as: (a) The best boy? (b) The gaffer? (c) The juicer? (d) The genius?

Count 20 points for each question correctly answered. A score of 60 is good, 80 is excellent, and 90 or above is colossal.

There's Curricular Cure For That Pain in the Neck

By BETTY CLARKE

AP Feature Service Writer

If you have trouble relaxing, maybe you should be going to school.

"Do-Nothing Classes" that teach students to relax are popular in many colleges.

The courses are the result of medical and physical education research.

The theory is that unused or little-used muscles play a big part in bringing about that pent-up feeling.

Dr. Josephine Rathbone, of Columbia university, pioneer in corrective gymnastics, not only teaches students how to relax but teaches them how to teach others.

Her textbook on corrective physical education reads like a medical journal, but she can also talk in layman's terms.

For instance, she says she has found that one of the most prevalent American complaints is a pain in the neck. The neck and shoulder muscles are used very little, she says, and she has a remedy, illustrated here.

She almost always varies exercises to suit the needs of the pupil. She insists that her classes be small and that each pupil gets personal attention.

She emphasizes the importance of medical examinations.

Arm flinging can help that pain in your shoulder and neck. Swing arms loosely from side to front, brushing thighs with hands in each movement.

Address by Judge Loughran Is Delivered at Winnisook

Life of Judge C. H. Ruggles Outlined by Noted Local Jurist at Meeting Held Recently

The following is the paper given by Judge John T. Loughran before the Ulster County Historical Society, September 14, at Winnisook Lodge:

Mr. President, fellow-members of the Ulster County Historical Society and our guests:

The part to which I address myself now is one to which I have been heretofore unaccustomed. I do not say this by way of apology. I have indeed faithfully tried to equip myself for the composition of this notice of a remarkable man.

Let me make clear at once one thing that I purpose not to attempt. I hold with George Santayana that there is no good in dying. The duffers who, as Mr. Santayana says, will drag a man's own person may have preceded his attainment of his intellectual vision. If, then, it is thought in any quarter that the mortal being who is made to pose for this crude portrait of mine stands at this day in need of handling by a debunker, I am not the man for that enterprise. Had I believed that he was but one of the shaver saints of an earlier day, I would in that case have saved you from any effort on my part to join the ineffective imitators of Lytton Strachey in his thrusts at the heroes of the Victorian era.

Charles Herman Ruggles was born February 10, 1789, in Litchfield county, Connecticut. In early manhood he was admitted to the profession of the bar and began in Kingston, New York, a practice of his calling in which he swiftly rose to distinction. His office in Kingston was on Main street near the corner of Fair street in a structure that faced the yard of the Old First Dutch Church. The site is now occupied by the building that was occupied by the building erected for his professional headquarters when some years ago he returned to us, full of the honors he had won in the acute competition of the bar of the city of New York.

In 1827 Judge Ruggles was married to Gertrude Beekman, of Kingston. She died in the following year. In 1830, he was married to Mary C. Livingston, of Poughkeepsie. New York, who survived at his death. Judge Ruggles was at one time a member of the Legislature of this state and at another was a member of the Congress of the United States. He was for 14 years a judge of important New York courts of original jurisdiction, that is, courts which determine controversies in the first instance. He was a delegate to the convention that in 1846 drafted the Constitution of the State of New York which as of January 1, 1847 was adopted by the people at the polls. In 1847 he was elected a judge of the New York Court of Appeals, the highest judicial tribunal of this state. Re-elected thereafter for eight-year terms beginning in 1854, he resigned in 1855, having meantime served as Chief Judge of the court. He died at Poughkeepsie June 15, 1865 in his 76th year.

These are the milestones along the course of an active and highly useful life. They make, of course, no very complete picture of what manner of man it was whose progress they record. They give no hint of the intellectual mood of his day, of the problems which confronted him, or of the success he achieved in their solution. If the tenor of his life and the manifestations of his character are now to be recaptured at all, this must, to a degree, be done by dint of the words of his judicial opinions. I know well enough that these can be no adequate measure of his share in the action and passion of his time. But nowhere else is Ruggles, the man, so fully introduced to us and it is from one side only that there is time to present him. More than that, the judgments of Ruggles the judge were his most important work. This was the part of him it was known was to be preserved and by which, as he understood, he was necessarily to be appraised. From that point of view, I ask you leave first to deal briefly with a few of his contributions to the rules by which English speaking peoples are governed and with some expressions of his major ideas in respect of the fundamentals of the complex affair of administering a government of laws and not of men.

By way of preface, I should perhaps give you a counsel of caution. The other night I read in the Kingston Daily Freeman a notice that this society would meet here today. I there discovered that I was "particularly qualified" for this undertaking, because said the notice. "Judge Loughran speaks the language of the Court of Appeals very accurately." You may remember that Governor Smith was wont at one time to refer to people who, as he said, "talk Court of Appeals English." He implied that the expert in that tongue was both incoherent and incomprehensible. I go on, then, with the business in hand.

It has been stated on good authority that most of the disputes of the world arise from words; that it is no exaggeration to say that at least half of the contests of the law have their origin in the ambiguous use of language; that great questions of principle may turn upon a single word and that valuable rights and interests may depend upon the meaning assigned to it. All this is well illustrated by a case in which Judge Ruggles wrote for the Court of Appeals. His judgment in that case is a neat example of his resourcefulness in the disposition of such a problem.

The case was that of a testator who by his will gave to his wife a legacy to be paid out of the avails of his real estate. By a following provision, the will directed that the real estate was not to be which government affords to his life, liberty and property. The payment of taxes is a duty and creates no obligation to repay, otherwise, than in the proper application of the tax. It is wrong (he wrote) that a few should be taxed for the benefit of the whole; and it is equally wrong that the whole should be taxed for the benefit of a few.

In the same strain, he speaks out in another of his judgments to this effect: "By far the strongest objection to the borrowing of money for public purposes, arises from the obligation to pay interest on the loan. The debts thus incurred have usually a long time to run; and the interest often amounts in the end to a greater sum than the principal. In this respect it makes no difference whether the debt is contracted on the general credit of the State, or on the credit of a fund belonging to the State. When the interest on the loan is raised by a tax, it comes from the pockets of the people individually. When it is paid out of a fund belonging to the people, it is paid out of their common purse."

Finally, I take this sentence of Ruggles as a strong expression of one of the great truths of Democracy of which we have need in season and out to remind ourselves. "The remedy for unjust or unwise legislation," he said, "is not to be administered by the courts, it remains in the hands of the people; and it is to be wrought out by means of a change in the representative body, if it cannot be otherwise obtained."

Respecting these specimens of the work of Judge Ruggles I remark in the first place the directness and simplicity of his words. His judgments abound in plain statements. There is no purple passage, there is much of logic and nothing of metaphor. What shines out is rare common sense and courage and independence. Here, we can say, was a man who stood his own ground, who did his own thinking and who spoke his own mind. Much of the work of any judge is of but passing importance. It remains a temporary record and soon outlives its usefulness. But there is one thing in the long result of time and that one thing is the spirit in which the work is done. In this aspect of the matter, I cannot do better than repeat these words of the associates of Judge Ruggles in the Court of Appeals: "There was never a more conscientious judge. His sense of duty was so strong that he would never give his assent to a judgment until he had fully explored and possessed the principles on which it depended."

The essential viewpoints of the Ruggles political philosophy have doubtless been made sufficiently plain. He believed that among the rights guaranteed to us by the fundamental law is the right of private property. His robust faith denied any power in government to give one man's property to another. His admonition that the remedy for unjust or unwise legislation is not through the courts, but remains in the hands of the people, is worthy of repetition. Let us dare to believe that the sting of this appeal to the self-reliance of the individual citizen is still potent among us. There is hope for us (as there is none now for many of the once free peoples of Europe) if we can steadily face the fact that Government is no super-human institution and cannot rise above the worth of the mortal men who are licensed to rule us in its name.

To the solid items of which I have made mention, there should be added something about other qualities more homely and human. During the presidential campaign of 1856, Ruggles was the presiding officer at a political rally held in Poughkeepsie in aid of the cause of Fremont. So great was the attendance that, as the Poughkeepsie Daily Eagle put it, "the town was full." Four platforms were not too many for the accommodation of the orators of the occasion, who were without benefit of any amplifying public address apparatus. A senator from Massachusetts had a hearing for two and a half hours and a governor from Ohio then took on for two hours more, leaving but a mere hour apiece for each of two New Yorkers who followed. Coincidentally five orations in the German language were delivered, all without surcease save for that vouchsafed by the offerings of the glee clubs of Rhinebeck and of Albany. Even Fremont carried Dutchess county at the ensuing election.

Shortly after the Civil War there was held at Poughkeepsie what was described as a "Sanitary Fair," an event designed to raise funds for the sanitary commission of the city. The second Mrs. Ruggles was head of the committee which had that affair in its keeping. A crowd of 4,000 attended on a single evening. In its account of the event, the Poughkeepsie Daily Eagle vouched for the fact that 917 quarts of ice cream, 50 gallons of lemonade and 46,000 oysters were consumed. The same newspaper also informed its readers that, "The crush of crinoline and the smash of hats was terrible but everybody was happy." The gross receipts were reported to be $18,000 plus, and the expenses only little more than $2,000. The fact that the balance of nearly $16,000 was raised in a then small community following a devastating war would seem to attest the possession by the second Mrs. Ruggles of a practical genius of high order. I take note that her gifts in that direction may not have been without influence on the favor that attended the career of her husband, a matter that James M. Barrie doubtless will make sufficiently lucid to any reader.

In the domain of public law the judgments of Judge Ruggles were not less logical and striking. Once upon a time he had occasion to express for his court its views respecting the always lively question of the nature of public office-holding. In that instance he used these forthright words: "Public offices in this state are created for the benefit of the public, and not granted for the benefit of the incumbent; their terms are fixed with a view to public utility and convenience and not for the purpose of granting the emoluments during that period to the office-holder. The length of the term is regulated by considerations of the public interest, affecting the public interest, but having no regard to the interest of the office-holder." These words, I have said, were forthright ones, but it is plain, I take it, that the court did not thereby buttress posterity. Quite probably, as I suppose, the actual fact in political service is still pretty much on the side of an ancient proposition of the political world—that is to say—"Few die and none resign."

Again, in a case which involved the validity of a tax, Judge Ruggles in equally forthright fashion sounded a note which some may think ought still to be dinned into the ears of our legislators. These were his words: "Money is property. Taxation takes it for public use; and the taxpayer receives, or is supposed to receive, his just compensation in the protection of his delightful play, "What Every Woman Knows." But however that may be, there can be no doubt, as I think I have shown, that Mr. Ruggles was equal to the hard details of public life in a workaday world.

His health none the less was unimpaired in his service in the Court of Appeals. We have noticed that, having been re-elected to a second term of eight years he retired within a year. The reason appears in the records of the court in these words of his associates: "Judge Ruggles' health continuing to decline he thought it right in 1855 to retire from his seat in the court, to which he had been recently elected; but he was not first to perceive that he was not fully competent to the labors of the bench. He, in fact, remained several months the solicitation of his associates, after his own wish was to retire."

There is little more to tell. On June 16, 1865, the Poughkeepsie Daily Eagle said: "We have with this issue the melancholy duty of announcing the death of Hon. Charles H. Ruggles one of the first men of the State, who died after a long illness fully prepared for the change." To that comment, I think it is in order to add that the Episcopal Church was accepted by Judge Ruggles as the body of Christian believers in whose communion he found the best support for his religious life. He had been one of a group who brought about the construction in Poughkeepsie of the Episcopal Church which he had attended there and of which he had been a trustee. There are entries in its records of his regular contributions to its activities. Thus he testified that his faith was not without works.

Having had no child, Judge Ruggles was not called upon to adventure himself with the perils of parenthood. By his will, he gave half of his estate to his wife and half to two nephews and a niece. The text of this short and simple document exhibits again the characteristic forthrightness of the man. He therein described himself as "being minded to dispose of my worldly estate in such manner as I consider just and proper."

I offer one short stroke more. On occasion, observing judges have advised their brethren not to forget that there is a high constituency competent to judge them, the profession of the bar. This is my own faith and so lastly I record the eloquent fact that when the Bar of Dutchess county took action in respect of the death of Judge Ruggles they listed first among his outstanding qualities a "universal courtesy and kindness."

Here this short study of a notable man comes to an end. Before I began it, I took counsel from the masters of this style of writing and was by them forewarned that so great are the disadvantages inherent in such a business that the result is likely to be at best a caricature and at worst a calumny. I can only hope that in my endeavor to get appropriate shadows on the portrait I have not broken the sitter's neck. In any case, it has been a genuine and sincere pleasure to have made the try and especially it has been a personal happiness to have done so at the behest and under the leadership of my brilliant friend who is the president of this society.

The Relief Issue

The Republican View

By J. WILLIAM DITTER

Representative from Pennsylvania and Member House WPA Investigating Committee.

Washington—Politics in relief and federal employment agencies again raises its ugly head in this election year 1940, as it did in 1936 and 1938.

With the opening of the campaign, July WPA rolls began to mount. Each successive week showed progressive increases, the total for the month reaching 89,000. And this was in the face of increased industrial activity and announcements from the Department of Labor that private employment was expanding.

Notwithstanding vast appropriations for defense, resulting in many new jobs, relief rolls continued to increase in August and remain at virtually the same high level. Under the Hatch Act, persons receiving incomes from the federal government are debarred from political activity. There is nothing in the law to prevent government agencies padding the relief rolls for political support.

New Deal relief is a standing record of scandal and extravagance. Congressional investigations, dominated by Democratic members, have exposed the unscrupulous exploitation of the needy on WPA rolls in a dozen states. Since 1933 the federal government has expended more than 15 billion dollars for relief. During each of the last two years the total cost of relief was nearly three times that in 1933, yet the number of persons receiving relief payments in the latter years was actually less than in 1933.

The inefficiency of the relief system, the billions wasted on frivolous and unnecessary projects is only equalled by the futile attempts of the administration to reduce unemployment. During seven years of the New Deal 18 per cent of the labor force of the nation has been unemployed, as compared with an annual average of 7.2 per cent during the 12 years, 1921-32 period under Republicans, a period with two depressions.

No Republican, No American, favors permitting those who are unemployed through no fault of their own to suffer. But practical experience has demonstrated that with federal assistance the states and local communities can administer relief more equitably and more reasonably than when it is distributed by a vast federal machine. This federal machine has great political power, however, and nothing will induce the New Deal to relinquish control over relief expenditures.

The administration attitude toward relief is similar to its position on other subjects. Relief is treated as an end in itself, rather than as a temporary measure against the time when every willing worker shall have a real job. If you do not believe in the form of political relief from Washington, the New Dealers proclaim you are opposed to relief—you would let the unemployed starve. It is a favorite New Deal subterfuge that passes for argument—if you object to a radical or wasteful method of achieving a desirable objective, you are opposed to the objective itself.

Relief is a present necessity and will continue to be unemployed.

MR. DITTER

til the situation which requires this artificial system is cured. This cannot be done by wasteful spending of borrowed money. It can only be accomplished by a restoration of the balanced economic life of the nation. The New Deal experiments, influenced by a group of radical thinkers about the executive, have stalled investment and industrial activity. Capital has been frightened into hiding and business intimidated by administration antagonism and the arbitrary rule of Washington bureaucrats.

The solution of the unemployment problem, the burden of relief, the restoration of industrial activity, and prosperity for the farmer, are all closely related questions which must be worked out, not as isolated interests, but as one. Once the handicaps the New Deal has placed in the way of business are removed, there will be a revival of activity which will supply jobs for those in forced idleness and those on relief. Republicans are utterly opposed to the philosophy of the New Deal which sees this country stalled on the dead center at the peak of its expansion. Republicans are positive optimists on the future possibilities of the nation.

The demand today is for a change of atmosphere and attitude in Washington. Government should be the umpire and should not attempt to be the general manager of the nation's business. A vast reservoir of private capital only awaits reasonable security in investment. Billions of this capital is needed for plant expansion and renewals that have been awaiting more favorable relations with government.

When agriculture and industry the capitalist, the laborer, can work harmoniously with Wash-

The Democratic View

By PAUL V. McNUTT

Federal Security Administrator

Washington—The WPA was founded in the belief that work is better than a dole. Most Americans still think so.

But there is another equally good reason for a public works program, and that is that there are a great many things that need to be done to build up the nation.

It is necessary that there be an extensive public works program in America. This is so whether there is unemployment or full employment. It is only good sense, however, to speed up and extend this program at a time when there are many men who cannot be absorbed into private employment.

During the past few years the public works and construction schedules have been telescoped with the result that building programs in some parts of the country have been set ahead several years.

This is all to the good. We get the improvements sooner than they would otherwise be available and we extend employment at a time when it is most needed.

The truth is, however, that the magnitude of the recent public works program is more apparent than real. What has happened is a proper and necessary transfer of much of the public improvement work from local to a federal tax basis. In this way relief has been afforded to local communities and the public has derived a third major benefit from the WPA program.

There has been much criticism of the WPA from quarters unsympathetic with the administration. It is said that the expenditures of public funds and the increase in the public debt has weakened the nation so that we are the less prepared to incur the expenses of national defense.

The truth is that exactly the opposite is the case. Our strength or weakness in the face of an international crisis such as the one we are now facing has nothing to do with the local, internal debt of the nation. It has a great deal to do with our industrial productivity, the skill and morale of our workers and the physical and tangible equipment which can be utilized for defense purposes.

In days of motorized armies it should not require much argument to demonstrate that we are in a much stronger position by reason of the four-billion-dollar investment during the past seven years in paved highways and streets. Nor is it difficult to understand how valuable are the results of the four billion dollars invested in flood control, reclamation, rivers and harbors and power dams.

It has been only a few weeks since the non-partisan defense commission demanded from the congress appropriations for an additional dam in the Tennessee valley. We should be thankful for the ones we already have.

Men are assets. They are assets because of the useful work they can do. So long as there are men in America who are able to work but unable to find jobs, a WPA program is essential to our welfare. So long as there are public improvements necessary, it is required for our security. And the greater the threat to that security, the greater the need for public works.

The idea of a systematic program of public works to help regulate employment and to obtain needed improvements at a time when they would otherwise be neglected is new to most people and it takes time for them to comprehend its significance. But when the public has thoroughly grasped the advantages of the WPA, it will be regarded as one of the greatest contributions of the administration to modern political economy.

What Congress Is Doing Today

(By The Associated Press)

Senate and House in recess. Senate interstate commerce committee considers proposed investigation of German control over defense industries and patents.

House appropriations subcommittee hears officials on $1,900,000,000 to finance draft and other defense measures.

Yesterday Senate finally approved $1,500,000,000 increase in RFC borrowing power for defense purposes and Latin American loans.

House is recess. When we seek to run away from our troubles we are likely to find new ones waiting for us, and then besides the old ones will probably catch up.

ington once more for the general welfare, the need for relief will be largely eliminated and unemployment will be reduced to a minimum.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

Proof by Verse
Charlotte, N. C.—Israel Peterson, charged with drunken driving, contended he had been to church. The prosecutor asked what the preacher talked about.
"He took his text from the first chapter of Nahum, third verse," replied Peterson. And he gave it in full.
The jury acquitted him.

Birthday Observance

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 21 (AP)—President Roosevelt and members of his family gathered today at his boyhood home for an informal observance of the 86th birthday of his mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt. The matriarch of Hyde Park house was on the front porch when her son arrived last night from Philadelphia, where he had pointed to free elections as a guarantee of "the complete and enduring safety of our form of government."

Nine Persons Hurt

Alexandria, Egypt, Sept. 21 (AP)—Nine persons were injured in a raid of Italian bombing planes on this British Mediterranean naval base early today. Officials said most of the bombs fell harmlessly into the sea. The last raid made off in the direction of Aboukir, where a few other explosions were heard.

Escaped Injury

Carlo Closi, 75 year old Delaware avenue resident, is reported to have escaped unhurt when he was struck and knocked down by a car near the John Walker place on Route 28 about 8:45 Friday night. The driver of the car was Radmila Lewis, 28, of Edgemere, who told Deputy Sheriff Segelken that she was a guest at the Pierre Henrotte home on the Maverick road.

Four Buildings Razed

Tijuana, Lower Calif., Mex., Sept. 21 (AP)—Fire early today razed the federal postoffice and three business buildings in this sleepy resort city, but firemen believed they were bringing it under control shortly before dawn. Loss was unestimated, but was reported to include all court and marriage records. Many Americans have been marrier here to escape California's three-day law.

School Teachers to Meet

The eastern zone meeting of the New York State Teachers' Association will be held in Albany on October 17 and 18. This zone includes schools in Albany, Columbia, Delaware, Greene, Dutchess, Fulton, Montgomery, Otsego, Rensselaer, Saratoga, Schoenectady, Schoharie, Ulster, Warren and Washington counties. Group and section meetings covering the whole range of the public school curriculum will be held under leadership of various chairmen.

Fined $25

Charles Apt, 59, of Foxhall avenue, was arrested this morning by Chief of Police Charles Phinney, who charged him with disorderly conduct in using loud and profane language. Later in police court Judge Matthew V. Cahill imposed a fine of $25 and suspended the serving of 180 days in jail, pending future good behavior.

French and Nippon Officials Resume Indo-China Talks said Rear Admiral Jean Decoux, governor general of Indo-China, was insisting on restricting the number of troops passing through the colony.)

The exact nature of the Japanese demands remained a secret. Originally, Japan sought permission from the French government at Vichy to move troops through the colony in order to strike a blow at China's "back door" supply routes.

Vichy granted "limited facilities" for troop and naval movements, with the understanding that details were to be worked out here. At the conferences here, however, Japan made new demands.

British Aircraft Guns Rout Nazis

all about the city marked the first raid.

Sporadic Firing

In the later hours of the second raid there was sporadic firing of anti-aircraft guns near the center of the capital, where several times the raiders glided in from great height to drop projectiles from just above the balloon barrage.

Towns in southern England and the coastal area also were bombed, but the attacks there were reported lighter than usual.

In a region just east of London, anti-aircraft gunners destroyed two German planes within five minutes early today. The first plane exploded in flames after a direct hit, and the second, flying toward London, was blown to pieces by the gunfire.

Three large bombs fell on the southwestern quarter of London during the night. The first wrecked practically every house in one street, killing two persons and injuring others seriously.

Another bomb crashed through several floors of a large block of flats, but most of the occupants were safe in shelters.

A famous old church in southeast London and an adjoining warehouse were burned out by incendiary bombs.

Some 500 people, mostly children, who were sheltered in vaults under the church, were shepherd to another shelter before the fire spread.

Our Growing Population

The following births have been reported to the Board of Health: Mr. and Mrs. Donald E. DuBois of Ashokan, a daughter, Lana Marie, in Kingston Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Harder of Hurley, a daughter, Elizabeth Ann, in Kingston Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Mills of 42 Sterling street, a son, Charles Stephan, in Kingston Hospital.

Home Leaders Are Booked for Game

Grunenwald's Club Will Meet Chichester

Sunday afternoon Charlie Grunenwald's Home Leaders baseball team will travel to Chichester to engage the home club in their second game of the season. The Home Leaders dropped the first game by a 12-5 score and are anxious to even the score.

The Home Leaders will present their usual lineup of E. Hopper, Zoller, Purvis and Turk on the infield; K. Hopper, Gadd and Embree in the outfield. Big Joe Mahar will hurl for the locals, with Eddie Ashdown doing the receiving. The veteran, Dewey Van Buren, will be held in reserve to aid Mahar should he need help in subduing the powerful mountain club. Peck will be on the mound for Chichester.

Members of the Home Leader team are asked to be ready to leave not later than 1 o'clock.

Baseball Sunday

The New Salem Wildcats will meet the West Hurley Club Sunday afternoon at the New Salem diamond. Game time is 2 o'clock.

De Tristan Captor Took Long Chance

Washington, Sept. 21 (AP)—The kidnaper, or kidnappers, of 3-year-old Marc de Tristan took a 93 to 1 chance of ending up in prison—or worse.

Since the passage of the "Lindbergh" law in 1933, the Federal Bureau of Investigation has investigated 187 kidnappings and solved 185. The unsolved cases are those of Charles Mattson, 10, kidnapped at Tacoma, Wash., December 27, 1936, and Peter Levine, 12, New Rochelle, N. Y., seized February 24, 1938. Both boys were slain.

Helpful Suggestions For Preventing Termites

Prevention is the surest control for termites. Builders recognize that there are many ways to prevent termites from gaining a foothold in the foundations of a house. Since dampness is a favorable condition for termite breeding, the ground around the house should slope away from the foundation walls to assure good drainage. Rainspouts should not empty close to the foundations.

If a storm sewer is not available spouts should be emptied onto splash blocks located to carry rain water at least three feet from the building. If a dry well is used, it should be located at least eight feet from the building.

Making the home safe requires a constant check for possible danger points. Since stair rails are in constant use and continual pressure is exerted on them, a check may prove worthwhile. A loose baluster might well be a source of injury, in addition to detracting from appearance.

Manufacturers and local supply dealers furnish wood and iron balusters to fit all sizes and types of stairs and balconies.

Concrete floors on porches, stoops, garages, and basement recreation rooms may easily be freshened with colorful paints. A reliable formula is a primer coat of floor enamel in the color selected, thinned with linseed oil or turpentine in accordance with directions. Allow to dry and then apply a second and third coat of the same enamel full body.

Skillful Hands Needed, Too

A change in our system of education that runs sharply counter to the thinking of the majority of our parents and their children in the past two decades was recently advocated by the American Youth commission, a group of distinguished citizens appointed by the American Council on Education.

In its report, the council suggests that "we abandon the mistaken notion held by many parents who assume that the only road to a higher social and economic status for their children leads through the traditional academic, college preparatory curriculum."

The commission urges the elimination of subjects of less importance in order that occupational adjustment services may be added. It lays greater importance upon the practical at the expense of what has been called the cultural.

The job of our schools is to best fit our children for a job in life; we need men who can work skillfully with their hands just as we need men who can work skillfully with their brains.

Car Hits Hydrant, Another Rolls Down Hill Into Wall

Two minor auto accidents were reported Friday by the Kingston police department. That morning Officer Krum reported that Liela H. Diehl, of 428 Liberty street, Newburgh, while moving her car along the curb in front of 296 Wall street, struck the fire hydrant. Both hydrant and car were damaged. It was claimed by the Newburgh woman that the hydrant was set too close to the curb.

Friday afternoon Officer Murphy reported that a car owned by John E. Cleveland of Saugerties, parked near the commissary of the welfare department, adjoining the city hall, had started to move. The car ran down the city hall drive, across Broadway into the wall in front of the high school. No personal injuries were reported.

Held for Parking

Barney Kunst of 115 Hone street, was arrested Friday by the police charged with parking his auto on the sidewalk at Dederick street and Broadway. The case was set down for a hearing in police court on Monday.

New Yorker, Without Funds, Thumbs Way Back to City Court

Walter McLaren of New York city, a former resident of Kingston, hitchhiked from New York to Kingston this morning to appear in police court in answer to a charge of failing to observe a full stop sign. He had been arrested September 14, the hearing adjourned until today.

McLaren informed Judge Cahill that he was not residing in New York but was without work. He has a wife and family, and all the money he had was $3.

McLaren said that he planned to hitchhike back to New York after his case was disposed of.

Judge Cahill said that as long as McLaren had thought enough to hitchhike from New York to Kingston to answer to the charge, he would suspend the payment of a fine.

Legion Resolution Opposes Proposed 'Emergency Wave'

Post was in no way connected with the Home Guard.

Drive to Start

The post membership drive is expected to get under way soon under the leadership of Michael Bruno who urged that every member take an active part in the campaign to secure members and make 1941 a banner membership year.

Past Commander Morton Finch, who is captain of the senior drum corps of the post, stated that the corps had offered to parade when the local guard goes to camp but after taking up the matter with the local guard officers it found out the boys would leave early in the morning which would be too early for staging a parade.

Plans for Ball

Commander Jerry Martin was instructed to appoint the necessary committees to make plans for the annual Victory Ball which is held on Armistice Night, November 11.

Following the meeting motion pictures showing some of the war scenes in the European war as well as scenes from this year's Memorial Day parade were shown through the courtesy of Al Weierich. Following the showing of the pictures refreshments were served by the post activities committee under the leadership of Vice-commander Stanley Dempsey.

Another surprise feature after the meeting was the appearance of the "deacon" through the kindness of William Fitzpatrick. The "deacon" entertained with several vocal selections with the musical accompaniment of his guitar.

The meeting was the most largely attended in many months indicating renewed interest on the part of the Legionnaires. A most successful year for the local post is anticipated.

No One Dreams You Made This Sea Shell Necklace

Easy to do—Using Macaroni

So smart you'll feel in this pretty necklace of colorful "sea shells." It has the fragile "tinkly" effect that's the last word in costume jewelry. And who'll guess you made it easily yourself—from macaroni shells!

You first apply a drop of water to the center of each shell, using a medicine dropper. Then, with a needle, bore a hole through the softened spot—as in our top diagram.

When you've prepared seven shells in this way, cut seven pieces of wire 2½ inches long and twist one end of each wire into a flat spiral ¼ inch in diameter. Now through each tiny shell hole stick a wire—as shown by the lower diagram. The spiral end of the wire rests on the outside of the shell and the other end fastens to your chain—which, if you wish, you can make easily from copper wire.

After all shells are securely fastened, paint them—outside and in—with enamel in your favorite color. Aqua blue, dusty pink are lovely.

Complete directions for this and other stunning pieces are given in our 32-page booklet. Includes clips, belts, boutonnieres, necklaces, bracelets, pins. Tells how to make raffia and sealing wax flowers.

Send 10c in coin for your copy of COSTUME JEWELRY YOU CAN EASILY MAKE to Kingston Daily Freeman, Home Service, 635 Sixth Ave., New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS and the NAME of booklet.

Mayor Gets Postal

Mayor C. J. Heiselman has received a post card from San Francisco from Jesse Quick, a boy who used to shine the mayor's shoes at the city hall. Quick recently enlisted in the U. S. Army and is on the way to his post in Hawaii. He stated on the card that he would be in San Francisco until September 19, and that before he sailed for Hawaii he planned to attend the Golden Gate Exposition.

Returned to Delaware

Howard W. Rich, who was sentenced September 17 to 10 days in the Ulster county jail on a charge of vagrancy, was taken to Wilmington, Del. Friday by officers from the Delaware State Hospital, from which he is reported to have escaped. When arrested by Troopers Dunn and Stickle, Rich gave his address as Wilmington. By order of Judge Cook his sentence here was reduced from 10 to four days.

Card of Thanks

We wish to thank our friends and neighbors for their kindness and expressions of sympathy extended during our recent bereavement in the death of our father, Willis Everett.

British Are Preparing

Rome, Sept. 21 (AP)—The British were reported today to be strengthening their defenses for a stand at Matruh against the Italian Legions now at Sidi Barrani in their eastward advance through Egypt. The Italian radio said masses of Italian planes had attacked the town, but that the British were still pouring supplies over the railroad line from Alexandria, apparently determined to fight any further Italian gains. The bombing of Matruh, the Italian high command said, was in reprisal for a British night raid on the Libyan port of Bengasi, where three persons were killed and 27 injured.

Bob Bush and Wallace Will Pitch in Series Game Sunday

Kingston Is One Up on Villagers; Meet in Saugerties

'Gabby' Benjamin Will Be With A. C. Club; Tiano and Francello Lead the Batters

The second and possibly the final game of the three-game Kingston Recreation-Saugerties A. C. baseball series is just about set for Sunday afternoon at Cantine Field in the village. Game time is 3 o'clock.

Where the pitchers left off last Sunday afternoon at municipal stadium the flingers are expected to pick-up tomorrow. Again it will be the rotund moundman, Bob Bush, who has been Charlie Husta's No. 1 flinger all season. For Saugerties Manager Schultz will counter with his ace thrower Eddie Wallace.

The selection of Bush again came after Charlie Neff's shoulder ailment failed to respond to treatment. But from the way Bobbie pitched the first game the injury to Neff might bring good dividends. Charlie has been on and off all year which would have placed the Recreation on the lower end of the odds if he was nominated to pitch.

With Ed Wallace slated to hurl for the Saugerties club tomorrow afternoon, Earl "Gabby" Benjamin, the first string catcher, will be ready to go. Joe Brosky of Hudson caught last week and had his troubles with the working slants of Lefty Ed Rosenstein. Benjamin will surely help the defensive play of Saugerties.

Managers Satisfied
Satisfied with the results of last week's game, at least as far as the game itself was concerned and not the score, Manager Schultz isn't planning any large scale changes with the exception of Benjamin and Wallace, the battery. In Kingston's camp the only possible shift will be Vince Smedes replacing Vince Stoll.

Husta will use Smedes, a left-hand batter, to offset the right-hand sluggers of which he has a number. Smedes will play in center. Tiano in left and Francello in right. This is the picket line which played a number of games for Kingston throughout the year.

A number of startling moments came up last Sunday afternoon when Kingston hopped on a 6 to 3 victory, three runs being scored across in the big eighth inning. Up until then, however, Ed Rosenstein had the Rees shackled with his portside flinging.

Kingston's air-tight inner defense clicked on all four in that first meeting. Chappie Van Derzee played at his best, something the fans haven't seen very much this season. His double-play ball to Schatzel squelched a Saugerties rally when it counted. As usual, Andy Celuch took a bow at his hot corner on third base. Celuch had a busy day but didn't bat an eye when those ringing boundaries were slapped his way.

Enthusiased over Kingston's sparkling win in the opening contest a number of Recreation followers are expected to follow the team up to Saugerties tomorrow. One of the best turnouts of the season is expected to jam the Cantine Field arena for this second brawl, one which is opined to go even further than the one in Kingston.

The lineups:
Saugerties: Reubenberg, 2b. Benjamin, cf. Van Etten, 1b. Simonites, 3b. Desmond, rf. Francello, ss. Swart, lf. Wallace, p.
Recreation: McLean, 2b. Van Derzee, ss. Smedes, cf. Tiano, lf. Simonites, rf. Schatzel, 1b. Zady, 3b. Celuch, 3b. Bush, p.

City Softball Champs

Another impressive softball season has been completed by the above Jones Dairy muckers of the City League division. Managed by Gil Sampson, also popular in bowling circles, the Dairymen copped 27 out of 28 games this year. The club won 14 matches in the first half and then came back with 13 more in the final round. Players composing this stellar softball squad are kneeling, left to right, Bob Balfe, ace flinger; Myron Herrick, Culver Ten Broeck, Johnny Schatzel, Chappie Cooper and Ben Toffel, in the back row are Babe Larkin, Manager Gil Sampson, Herbie Van Deuzen, Charlie Tiano, Frank Roe, Jack Kelse and Buddy Hughes.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ

New York, Sept. 21 (AP)—There'll be $50,000 worth of coaching talent in the Knute Rockne film—Howard Jones, Pop Warner, A. A. Stagg, Elmer Layden, Bill Spaulding and Marty Brill. . . . Babe Ruth has turned down a $5,000 offer to play Santa Claus for a N. Y. department store this Xmas. . . . Who started that rumor that Tom Stidham is getting through at Oklahoma? Tom wants to ask the guy where he's going. . . . G.O.P. chiefs were all set to put Artie McGovern on the Willie campaign train to keep the candidate fit. Willie nixed the idea—said he's never taken exercises and doesn't intend to start now. . . . And that was that.

Today's Guest Star

Bob Stedler, Buffalo Evening News: "If Steve O'Neill doesn't manage Buffalo next season, it is likely he will have the Jersey City job in spite of the fact that it is a Giant farm club. . . . After all, Mayor Frank Hague is the boss there."

Tommy Farr is due any clipper now. . . . Frank Howard is having a time replacing Banks M'Fadden at Clemson. Howard has a guy who can kick and pass, another who can run and kick and a third who can run and pass but there ain't anybody in sight who can run, kick and pass. Oi, Oi. . . . About the only wrestling coach who didn't apply for Ed Gallagher's old job at Oklahoma A. and M. was Art Griffith, who got the job. Seems Gallagher left word he hoped Griffith would be called in to pick up where he left off. . . . Interest in the American League race is so widespread, the scoreboard at Ebbets Field has no room for National League news these days.

Long Quest Ends

Thirty years ago an Illinois blacksmith forged a pair of horse shoes with an iron four leaf clover in the center of each. . . . One he sent to big Ed Walsh, the old Sox pitching star. . . . The other he put away until he found someone he deemed worthy of it. . . . Now it hangs over the locker of Ted Lyons.

If the Tigers fail to get into the World's Series, Buck Newsom can pick up $3,500 by pitching exhibitions on the coast. . . . Here's a guy to watch: Although only 29, Eddie Leishman has won two pennants in two years as manager of the Spokane (Wash.) club. . . . Stoney McLean, the old sports writer, is doing a slick job of broadcasting the Philadelphia home games. . . . The N. Y. Football Writers' Association is working on Cornell to enlarge the press box accommodations which can't take care of the crowds now that Cornell is big time again. . . . Washington may give Boots Pfefferberger another chance in the majors.

Turf Luck

Hirsch Jacobs, the turf's leading trainer for the last seven years, is getting his lumps at Aqueduct. . . . On the other side of the picture is C. S. Howard, owner of Seabiscuit. . . . He paid $7,050 for five yearlings at Saratoga last year and already of them—Porter's Cap—has won $33,000.

May the Best Team, etc.

Two teams in a Minnesota rural league are having the very devil of a time deciding the season's honors. . . . For the last two Sundays, Glenwood and Villard have played extra inning tie games. . . . They will go at it again tomorrow.

The Pennsylvania State Grange has decided on Wilkes-Barre as the meeting place of the 1940 annual session and the dates will be December 10-12. Wilkes-Barre is located in the heart of a great Grange territory and indications point to the largest attendance ever brought together at a State Grange session in the Keystone State.

Opening Grid Games Are Slated for Colleges Today

Most Battles Are Listed With Small Opponents; Next Saturday Will Be Official Start

New York, Sept. 21 (AP)—Except for the kind of fans who figure that any football game is of interest just because its football, there's nothing particularly stirring about the opening of the 1940 college football season this week-end.

Nevertheless the campaign already is under way and sooner or later all other sports will have to step aside.

Today's program is limited to about a dozen "major" teams, mostly in the south, and perhaps 50 others that are definitely in the small college class.

Eight southern conference outfits face the kind of foes usually chosen for early-season workouts in addition to North Carolina State and William and Mary, which started off with a bang last night by playing a conference game. Three southeastern conference schools open the season today, one of the big eastern colleges and one member of the Big Six, Iowa State.

North Carolina, which figures to be one of the ranking powers of the southern conference this year, starts off against Appalachian State Teachers. Because it's high school day, when high school seniors from all over the state are guests of the university, a crowd of 25,000 should give the Tar Heels the day's biggest turnout.

Other tilts involving southern conference members are Clemson vs. Presbyterian, Davidson vs. Rollins, Virginia Military against Roanoke, Virginia Tech against Catawba, Washington and Lee against Hampden-Sydney, Wake Forest against William Jewell of Missouri and Richmond against the Newport News Naval Apprentice School.

Wins Friday Game

North Carolina State tossed a surprise into the proceedings last night by trouncing the highly-publicized William and Mary team 16-0 before 17,500 fans at Norfolk. Scoring in the first four minutes, the hard-charging Carolinians outplayed their rivals from start to finish.

Kentucky faces perhaps the strongest opposition in the southeastern conference openers, playing Baldwin-Wallace, a tough little Ohio rival. Mississippi meets Union University and Louisiana State encounters Louisiana Tech in a night game. As an added southern attraction, Centenary plays Hardin-Simmons of Texas.

Eastern College, the east's representative in the Cotton Bowl last January, opens its new campaign against Centre, which shouldn't make the Eagles much trouble but which has enough drawing power to pull a capacity crowd of 23,000 into the B. C. stadium.

Further west, the best games are Iowa State against Luther, Cincinnati against Hanover and Montana State against Western State in a Rocky Mountain conference clash.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT

(By The Associated Press)

New York—Pete Lello, 133½, Chicago, outpointed Irving Eldridge, 134, New York, (10); Al Davis, 145½, Brooklyn, outpointed Tony Martelliano, 146½, New York, (10).

Hollywood—Jackie Wilson, 138, Los Angeles, stopped Jimmy Garrison, 142½, Kansas City, (6).

San Diego, Calif.—Jack Coggins, 176, San Diego, knocked out Art Garrett, 184, Denver, (1).

Twins Take Over

Twin brothers Tom and Ed Kelly are first-string guards on the Fort Myers High School football team this year. If they need substitutes, brothers Solomon and Buddy Hawkins fill in. And the third-stringer is Allen Kelly, brother of the twins.

COME AND GET IT, BOWLERS

Chicago, Ill.—Cash prizes and bowlers' merchandise awards aggregating $50,000 will be offered this Fall in the coast-to-coast Red Crown Bowling Carnival. Pretty Rosemary Taylor says this means to remind you of the classic with the approval of R. F. Bensinger, president of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co., sponsor of the event. There will be eight weekly contests in six classifications of the Red Crown. The first contest opens Oct. 12. Play is open to men and women keglers.

Fun for Figaro
Memphis, Tenn. (AP)—"Figaro," a black kitten, and "Gene Autry," a small turtle, are playmates. Mrs. J. W. Ashwood says. Figaro scoops the turtle out of his shallow bowl and then the fun begins. The turtle will run for cover, Figaro will fish him out, and the game begins again.

Vitt 's Criticized for Use Of Feller in Relief Duty; Pre-World Series Goes On

Buck Newsom Cracked for 11 Hits; Rookie Smith Relieves; Al Milnar and Rowe Are Set

Detroit, Sept. 21 (AP)—The opening battle was ended but the argument raged on today as the Detroit Tigers, a full game up on their foes, squared off against the Cleveland Indians in the second part of the American League's pre-World Series triple feature.

As usual the argument centered on the No. 1 man in most of Cleveland's disturbances this year—Manager Oscar Vitt—against whom 12 of the Indians rebelled last June 13.

This time Vitt's strategy was under fire as a result of the eighth inning of yesterday's contest in which Detroit scored five runs to lock up a 6 to 5 victory after appearing hopelessly defeated. Vitt was being criticized for:

(1) Removing Pitcher Mel Harder after he had allowed only four singles and one run in seven and one-third innings.

(2) Sending Bobby Feller in as relief hurler when the young Iowan had benefited from only 24 hours rest after going all out to defeat the Washington Senators 2 to 1, on Wednesday.

Vitt showed no surprise when informed that he was being "panned" in some quarters. "I'd do the same thing in the same situation today," Vitt said. "Harder, who is past 30 years of age, was tiring and had lost his control."

Second-guessers pointed out that Harder had stood the Tigers on their heads and that a walk to Barney McCosky and a single by Charley Gehringer with one man out was the sole damage that had occurred in the inning in which he was removed. A five-minute huddle involving Vitt, Harder, Catcher Frank Pytlak and Shortstop Lou Boudreau preceded Harder's departure. Captain Hal Trosky did not participate

Redemptorists Appointed To University Faculty

Two noted Redemptorist educators who for several years have been stationed at Mt. St. Alphonsus Seminary at Esopus, have been appointed to the faculty of the Catholic University of America at Washington, D. C. The Rev. Francis J. Connell, C. S. S. R., who has been professor of dogmatic theology at Esopus, will teach moral theology at Washington, and the Rev. John H. Schultz, C. S. S. R., who has been professor of sacred music and ecclesiastical music at Esopus, will teach homiletics and sacred eloquence at the university. Both clergymen are well known in Kingston, having preached on many occasions in local churches.

Rummage Sale

All those having contributions are asked to call 1959 or 793-J.

R.A.F. Claims Damage

London, Sept. 21 (AP)—The RAF has "visited and bombed" 90 per cent of Germany's synthetic oil plants and 80 per cent of her regular oil refineries, Hugh Dalton, minister of economic warfare, declared today in a speech. "These targets have been heavily hit, even though production still continues at a reduced rate," he said.

Financial and Commercial

Defense Activity Features Business News of the Week

Stocks closed irregularly higher Friday, with transactions down to 380,000 shares. Industrials in the Dow-Jones list opened under Thursday's close, but gained slightly in later trading, to close at 131.61, the day's best level and a net gain of .27 point. Rails were up .02, to 28.27, while utilities had a fractional loss, closing at 21.98.
The situation in Europe was seen as more beclouded than ever as censors in Great Britain clamped down on detailed descriptions of air raids and accounts of their exact time.
Business news continued to feature huge defense expenditures and consequent industrial activity. Wright Aeronautical announced $1,000,000 plant expansion for magnesium foundry to make aircraft engine castings. Grumman Aircraft will build new $2,000,000 addition at its Beth Page plant, to be financed by RFC. War Department awarded $10,863,000 contract to Stone & Webster for construction of TNT plant at Wilmington, Ill., to be operated by du Pont.
More than half a million dollars in contracts were awarded by the War Department, a near record. Companies participating included Consolidated Aircraft, Midvale Co., Remington Arms, Western Cartridge, Savage Arms, American Locomotive, Baldwin, A. C. F., Bendix Aviation and Sperry Gyroscope.
Department store sales throughout the country made a gain over last year of ten per cent, Federal Reserve reports, but gain was not as good as in the preceding week, when sales were up 11 per cent. In the New York area the gain last week was eight per cent. Chicago and Kansas City were tops with gains of 21 and 22 per cent respectively.
Domestic business of American Radiator is reported running at the best rate since 1929 with indicated earnings for the quarter well over a year ago.
Auto output continues upward, with 78,820 cars this week compared with 63,240 last. Ward's estimates forecast possible output of 100,000 units next week.
The National Defense Commission is launching a new survey of the role steel industry is to play in the defense program. Will determine the government's attitude toward such questions as expansion of producing and processing facilities rather than rationing present capacity through priorities. Will also explore possibility of converting old units for handling of steel needed for defense.
Great Britain is a likely bidder for 25 old merchant vessels for which the Maritime Commission yesterday called for bids. The ships were built during the World War and are laid up in the James river, Va., and at New Orleans. Britain would use them for carrying Canadian wheat.
Commodity markets again staged a general advance Friday and the Dow-Jones index gained 0.21 point from Thursday, its sixth advance. Cotton was up three to seven points. Wheat closed 1/4 to a cent a bushel higher. There was a sharp rise in wool futures. In Boston market price of raw wool has been marked up as much as eight cents a pound in the past two weeks. Demand for copper outran supplies, with volume far above Thursday's sales of 9,355 tons; price held at 1 1/2 cents a pound.

Commander of 156th Pays Visit

New York, Sept. 21 (AP)—Selective buying put props under the stock market in today's brief session.
Steels, farm implements, rails and an assortment of preference issues were among the favorites. With the exception of the latter, however, some of which pushed up 1 to 3 points or so to new 1940 tops on 10-share trades, advances generally were limited to minor fractions.
While the trend, during most of proceedings, was moderately higher, many leaders were unchanged or slightly under water at the close.
There were occasional active flurries over the two-hour stretch and transfers approximated 275,000 shares.
Market sentiment seemed to have taken a turn for the better, brokers said, but fears of unexpected European upsets over the week-end caused even the most bullish commission house customers to keep commitments relatively light or even up accounts in some instances.
Some preferred stocks were believed to have reflected sizable accumulations of unpaid dividends and the likelihood these might be cleared up as corporation earnings mount. Among senior issues given a lift were those of Pittsburgh Steel, Jones & Laughlin, Budd Mfg., American Locomotive, Otis Steel, Certain-Teed, Celotex, Mengel and American Car & Foundry.
Common shares in front the greater part of the time included U. S. Steel, Youngstown Sheet, General Motors, Chrysler, International Harvester, J. I. Case, Deere, Oliver Farm, Glenn Martin, Sperry, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Great Northern, American Smelt-ing, International Nickel, American Locomotive, Dow Chemical, Allied Chemical and Eastman Kodak.
Demand for carrier bonds helped the loans department. Commodities were moderately steady.

Commander of 156th Pays Visit

Col. Lansing McVikar, commander of the 156th Field Artillery, paid a visit to Mayor C. J. Heiselman at the mayor's office yesterday afternoon to inform the residents of the city that the army would take good care of all the boys from the 156th during their year's stay at Fort Dix. Those present were, left to right, Capt. Harold Clayton, Col. Lansing McVikar, Major Charles Behrens, Mayor C. J. Heiselman, Capt. Fred Coombs, Alderman-at-large John Schwenk and Capt. Ernest Steuding.

Batteries in Need Of 42 Recruits

Units Will Leave Kingston Wednesday for Fort Dix; Leaves Are Given

With the departure of Battery A and Headquarters Battery, First Battalion, of the 156th Field Artillery for Fort Dix at Wrightstown, N. J., on Wednesday morning at 8 o'clock, it was announced at the state armory here this morning that 42 recruits were still needed to bring the two units to full peacetime strength. The order changing the time of departure from Tuesday to Wednesday was received at the armory Friday afternoon.
The recruiting drive staged this week was continued this week and every effort will be made to enlist recruits before the two local units leave for a year's intensive military training.
With the exception of the guard detail on duty at the armory on Manor avenue, where guard detail is on duty day and night, and the truck drivers who leave Sunday afternoon, all of the men were given leaves of absence at noon today and will not have to report until Monday morning at 7 o'clock at the armory.
This will likely be the last week-end that the guardsmen will spend in their own homes until they return from the year's training duty.
Sunday afternoon all of the trucks of Battery A will leave for Middletown while the trucks of Headquarters Battery will leave for Newburgh, to assist in conveying the Second Battalion of the 156th Field Artillery to Fort Dix. The trucks of the local units will return Tuesday so as to be in readiness to convey the local units to Fort Dix on Wednesday.
Friday afternoon Col. Lansing McVikar, commanding officer of the 156th Field Artillery, paid a formal call on Mayor C. J. Heiselman at the city hall in one of the several visits made to the city officials in the various cities in which the regiment has units. He was accompanied by Major Charles N. Behrens, Captain E. A. Steuding and Captain Frederick L. Coombs.
The official order deferring the departure of the local units from Tuesday to Wednesday was received at the armory here on Friday afternoon.
Commanding officers of the two local units said this morning that it was planned to leave the armory on Manor avenue promptly at 8 o'clock Wednesday morning and it was expected the units would arrive at Fort Dix about 4 o'clock that afternoon.
Tentative plans for holding a parade to honor the departing soldiers have been abandoned by Kingston Post of the American Legion when it was learned that the soldiers will leave early Wednesday morning.
This was the first kidnapping ever to mar the sedate life of this well-to-do community, made up largely of estates scattered through the hills rising west of historic Camino Real. And it was the first major kidnapping in the entire nation for nearly 16 months.
Police were advised of the kidnapping and were in pursuit of the kidnaper before the De Tristan family learned the boy had been taken.

Gates, who with his wife came here for the recent marriage of the countess' brother, Charles Christenson, was taking an active part in arranging to comply with the kidnaper's wishes. He told newsmen:
"We have requested all law enforcement agencies to withhold any action in this case until we have complied with any and all requests of the man who has our child."
"We wish to comply with any and all demands of the man and will do so."
"So far, all law enforcement officials have agreed to comply with our requests, and we are ready to meet all demands of the man."
"In kindness to us, we believe that everybody should withdraw from the vicinity of our home to give the person holding the boy every opportunity to communicate with us."
With authorities cooperating the family was left alone, only a traffic
